President Put In Wisconsin Primary Race With Garner

Unless Roosevelt Withdraws Election Will Be Early Test On Third-Term Issue

By the Associated Press

Madison, Wis., Feb. 8.—Gustave J. Keller, of Appleton, Wis., president of the Democratic Party Organization of Wisconsin, filed papers with the Wisconsin secretary of state today nominating President Roosevelt for a third term and a partial slate of Roosevelt-instructed delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

[A full slate of Garner delegates in Wisconsin was selected last week and acknowledged by the Vice President. A direct Roosevelt-Garner clash thus is assured unless the President withdraws.—Editor's note.]

Wisconsin will be among the first States to voice approval or disapproval of the controversial third term. The primaries will be held April 2.

Keller said all delegates signed pledges to "support and vote for President Roosevelt in the Democratic National Convention and for the perpetuation of his policies," or to support the "candidate designated by him" if he declined to run.

Wisconsin statutes do not require candidates to indicate whether they will accept or reject the nomination.

Garner Drive in Illinois

Chicago, Feb. 8 (AP).—Illinois friends of Vice President Garner began a brisk campaign today which may put his name on the State's Presidential preferential primary ballot April 9.

There was no official announcement to this effect, but authoritative reports had it that a primary petition bearing the requisite number of signatures would be ready before the deadline for filing petitions fell at midnight tomorrow.

A Garner emissary from Washington was in Chicago, but he would not comment on his activities. He referred inquiries to Julius F. Smietanka, Chicago attorney who was collector of internal revenue here during the Wilson Administration.

Smietanka confined himself to the guarded statement that he would be very glad to see Garner's name on the ballot with that of President Roosevelt. The attorney said he might have more to say later.

Garner Reticent

The Vice President, questioned at Washington, said he had "no comment to make."

Mayor Edward J. Kelly and National Committeeman Patrick A. Nash, who entered Mr. Roosevelt in the Democratic primary, were at Springfield tonight conferring with Gov. Horner and other Democratic leaders in an effort to select a "harmony" State ticket.

Local supporters said tonight that Representative Fish would be entered in the Republican Presidential primary, meeting the challenge of Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, who already has filed.

Fish Petition Filed

Leslie Wheeler-Reid, of Chicago, went to Springfield to file petitions for Fish, New York Congressman.

The Fish petitions, Wheeler-Reid said, were not accompanied by a certificate of candidacy. Mr. Roosevelt's name was entered last Saturday without a certificate, Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes holding it unnecessary since the Illinois primary is advisory only.

Dewey tonight again personally challenged other Republicans to enter the Illinois primary as he stopped in Chicago while en route to Portland, Ore.

By John B. Oakes

William Dudley Pelley, debonair chieftain of the Silver Shirts, held the spotlight of the Dies Committee yesterday as District and North Carolina authorities wrangled over the question of his arrest.

Thoroughly at his ease, the Silver Shirt leader admitted to the committee that he was anti-Semitic and that if he had achieved power in this country, he would have adopted some of Hitler's program.

To such an extent did Pelley persist in his policy of complimenting the committee for "the good job" it is doing that, for the second time in two days, Acting Chairman Starnes insisted that the witness refrain from expressing his opinion on this subject.

Meanwhile, police in Pelley's home town of Asheville, N. C., sent to Washington a second telegraphed

Civil Service Board Scores FBI Chief

Misrepresentation, Dictatorial Acts, Unfair Play Charged

While the House yesterday paved the way for consideration of the Ramspeck Bill to bring approximately 300,000 additional Government employes under civil service, the long-standing quarrel between the Civil Service Commission and J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, was brought into the open.

On strength of a 213 to 122 vote favoring a rule allowing the measure immediate consideration, Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, predicted the bill, of which he is the author, would pass the House today. He regarded the vote as an expression of House sentiment in favor of the bill.

However, a blistering statement from the Civil Service Commission denouncing Hoover for recent testimony before the House Appropriations Committee is expected to have repercussions in debate preceding a vote.

Hoover's testimony, cited yesterday by Representatives as an argument against extending the civil

Washington Heiress Forgets $80,000 Pearls

It cost $80.50 in freight and insurance to get a string of pearls to Washington yesterday.

Miss Audrey N. Campbell, 26, of 78 Kalorama circle northwest, left the pearls in a New Orleans hotel last week. When she sent for them the manager asked their value. She placed it at $80,000.

Miss Campbell, who inherited $2,000,000 from her grandfather, Levi Z. Leiter, was in South Carolina when the jewels were delivered.

Care of Sick At Blue Plains Is Criticized

U. S. Health Service Doctor Inspects Home; Inquiry Begins Today

The House District Committee prepared yesterday to conduct three separate investigations of local affairs as Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, took a United States Health Service physician on an inspection trip to Blue Plains.

Preparing to launch the formal hearings in the welfare inquiry with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt as first witness at 2 o'clock this afternoon, D'Alesandro called for a report today from the Public Health Service.

Dr. Lyman A. Fullerton, of the division of hospitals of the Health Service, criticized the care of ill inmates at the Home for the Aged and Infirm, D'Alesandro said, and the quarters and inadequate sanitary equipment.

Meanwhile, Representative Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, called an executive meeting of his special subcommittee directed to investigate the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's administration for this morning. Hearings will start early next week, Eberharter said.

An investigation of charges that some local gasoline dealers have been substituting inferior gasoline for high test was promised by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma. Nichols will confer with Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee before asking for the investigation.

A new report on the Home for the Aged and Infirm was released by D'Alesandro. Prepared by Representative Tenerowicz (Democrat), of Michigan, the report recommended a full-time physician and an increase in the nursing staff.

Tenerowicz, a physician, said the home is overcrowded, insanitary in places, and in need of equipment.

11 Join Blood Bank Committee As More Benefits Are Planned

Addition of 11 to the women's committee on the Children's Hospital blood bank campaign and the scheduling of more benefit bridge parties were among yesterday's developments in the campaign.

Mrs. Winslow B. Van Devanter and Mrs. Laurence H. Green, co-chairmen, announced that the women's committee, whose more than 100 members will sponsor or participate in benefit parties, now numbers the following additional recruits:

Mrs. Noyes Lewis, Mrs. Don Caffey Glassie, Mrs. Richard A. Kearny, Mrs. Samuel H. Kauffmann, Mrs. Milton King, Mrs. Sutherland Mayo, Mrs. George Pettengill, Miss Cecil Lester Jones, Miss Minnie M. Hardy, Mrs. Edward E. Gann and Mrs. Ellen L. Warren.

Eager to do its bit to maintain the Children's Hospital blood bank, most of whose beneficiaries are sick and injured children from families too poor to pay for needed blood and serums, is the Lend-a-Hand Society of Mount Vernon Seminary, which yesterday announced plans for a 12-table benefit bridge tomorrow night, Miss Margaret Fountain, president, is in charge of arrangements.

Harry L. Wilson, commander of James Reese Europe Post No. 5, American Legion, reported that a "bank" fund is being raised among the membership. Meanwhile, Mrs. Addie M. ## 3,000 Rally Here to Push Youth Bill

'Roll Out the Ballots' Is Theme Song; Fight Looms on Plan To Oust Communists

A pilgrimage of American youth, more than 3,000 strong, was converging on Washington last night, and even before the arriva' of the rank and file some of the leaders had begun a war of words.

The first session of the American Youth Congress will be tonight at 8 when Attorney General Jackson will discuss civil rights and Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, will discuss his $500,000,000 American youth bill.

All principal sessions of the 3-day gathering will be in the Departmental Auditorium, Thirteenth street and Constitution avenue.

Debate on Liberties

Jobs, peace, and civil liberties are the topics of particular interest to the youths, according to the congress agenda, but already there is evidence of dispute over the extent of civil liberties on which all the delegates can agree.

All will listen eagerly to Senator Murray's discussion of his bill calling for a $500,000,000 appropriation for the financing of "vocational guidance, vocational training, and employment opportunities for youth between the ages of 16 and 25."

Before the delegates leave Sunday night and Monday for their homes in all parts of the country, scores of Congressmen will have been button-holed in behalf of the Murray bill. Some of the delegates have a song:

"Roll out the ballots. Eight million new votes to cast.
"We've got the ballots. See that the Youth Act is passed."

Roosevelt to Speak

On the formal program are a parade tomorrow morning along Pennsylvania avenue to the White House lawn, with President Roosevelt addressing the congress from the South Portico at 12:30 p. m.; talks later Saturday by John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chairman, and Aubrey Williams, National Youth Administration director, and a talk Sunday by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Unscheduled on the regular program is an effort to drive Communist elements from the 63 groups composing the congress. This battle had one prelude last night in statements from rival spokesmen. Monday John D. M. Hamilton, Republican National Committee chairman, refused to send an official representative to the congress until Communist members are ousted.

Tells Press of Strategy

Twelve Republican legislators were invited to a White House conference Monday night to meet Youth Congress leaders, but none appeared. About 40 Democrats took part.

Mysterious Call Delays Approval Of City WPA Chief

A mysterious telephone call yesterday delayed the confirmation of Paul Edwards as District WPA administrator.

The Senate first confirmed Edwards' nomination in routine fashion but then reconsidered it upon motion of Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, who acted on a hurried request from Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington.

Schwellenbach explained afterward that he was called to the telephone a few minutes before the Senate went into executive session to consider nominations.

A man whose name he didn't get urged that the confirmation be prevented and insisted that he had information which would be valuable to the committee which reported Edward's nomination favorably.

While explaining that he had no connection with the committee, Schwellenbach agreed to ask that confirmation be delayed for a day and invited his informant to call at his office today.

Turks Seize Nazi-Owned Naval Yards

German Engineers Dismissed; Citizens Of Reich Leaving In Large Numbers

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, Feb. 8.—Turkey, nonbelligerent ally of Britain and France and guardian of the Dardanelles, suddenly seized the German-owned Krupp shipyards on the Golden Horn today and placed her own marines in charge.

The Turkish government at once discharged the German naval engineers and technicians who had been outfitting Turkish submarines in the huge marine works.

Other Seizures Due

The confiscation of the Krupp Works will be followed by government seizure of other German property in Turkey "sooner or later," it was reported authoritatively tonight.

Official quarters refused to explain the reason for the shipyard seizure, declaring only, "spring is coming"—which many observers fear will bring a Russian or German drive through the Balkans to seize the Dardanelles.

Coincidentally, in Bucharest, the Rumanian ministry of national defense posted orders for every officer and noncommissioned officer possessing technical training to join the colors April 1.

Another order called all qualified youths to become officers to join the Rumanian army by February 15 "for training."

The Golden Horn, on which the huge Krupp yards are located, is an inlet of the strategic Bosphorus Straits which separate Asia Minor from Europe.

Germans Leave Country

Large-scale departures of German residents from Turkey, particularly businessmen, were disclosed in official quarters.

Some quarters attributed the exodus to Germany's desire to get all her manpower home as soon as possible for a big drive against Britain and France. Others blamed the feeling that war may spread to southeastern Europe and the Near East in the spring.

German businessmen have had monopolies in some fields in Turkey and German specialists were numerous in this country until the outbreak of the European war and Turkey's subsequent alignment with Britain and France.

"Turkey Is Not Neutral"

German influence has been on the wane, however, in recent months, and the activities of German Ambassador Franz von Papen have come in for outspoken criticism in the Turkish press.

Foreign observers saw the seizure of the Krupp plant and the other measures directed against German interests as a logical sequence to the recent declaration of Sukru Saracoglu, Turkish foreign minister, that "Turkey is not neutral but only nonbelligerent for the moment."

Budget Bureau Returns Seal Plan With Objections

Accompanied by objections of four Federal agencies, the Seal plan for District government reorganization was returned yesterday to the Commissioners by the Budget Bureau.

Neither the letter of comment from the Budget Bureau nor those from the agencies were made public, but the objections were said to be of a "minor" nature. Comments on the plan were made by the Secretaries of War and Interior, the Comptroller General and the Civil Service Commission.

In no sense has the Budget Bureau placed its stamp of approval on the reorganization plan, but on the other hand, it has not disapproved, it was indicated.

The Commissioners called in their "kitchen cabinet" to discuss the comments from the Budget Bureau and the agencies and later assigned the cabinet to "study the matter." It is expected the reorganization bill and comments will be forwarded to Congress by February 19.

Secretary of State Asserts 'Grounds' For Belief Russia Broke Pledges to Us

Sympathy for Finland

GALLUP POLLS in England and the United States show both peoples approve giving aid to Finland. Page 2.

Speed in Aid Urged

By Robert C. Albright,

The United States Senate yesterday overwhelmingly recorded its sympathy for Finland by calling on the Securities and Exchange Commission to speed consideration of any Finnish government bond issue.

A simple resolution voicing the "sense of the Senate" was adopted 65 to 3. The action has no binding legal effect. Sponsors said it would "psychologically encourage" sale in this country of any Finnish bonds privately floated and registered by the SEC.

The Senate action coincided with a letter from Secretary of State Hull stating that this Government "on several occasions" had ground to believe the Soviet government had not fully lived up to its 1933 accord with this country.

Holds Break Unnecessary

Hull's letter was received by Chairman Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in response to a resolution sponsored by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan. Hull said the State Department did not consider continuance of diplomatic relations to be "wholly contingent" on fulfillment of Soviet pledges made in the Litvinoff agreements preceding official recognition.

He said the department is accustomed to use "the very channels which exist by virtue of diplomatic relations" to try to bring about adjustments when such differences occur.

Pro-Finnish and anti-Russian feeling in the Senate was brought into sharp relief as the chamber prepared to call up today the Brown bill increasing Export-Import Bank capitalization $100,000,000 to make possible another $20,000,000 non-military loan to Finland.

Vandenberg in a statement said the Hull letter "publicly convicts Moscow of two definite breaches in the Litvinoff pledges." Vandenberg termed recognition of Russia a "mistake" that "ought to be corrected." Any advantage from continued Russian contact he declared were "spectacularly denied" by futile negotiations for release of the "City of Flint."

Gold Policy Under Fire

A dual attack meanwhile was opened in the Senate on continued Treasury purchase of Russian gold.

Vandenberg made public two letters from Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau showing imports of $252,137,655 of Russian gold since 1934. Imports of gold directly from Russia totaled $30,696,000, while imported gold bearing the Russian stamp reached $215,441,655, the letters showed. Morgenthau reported that another $5,000,000 in gold shipped directly from Vladivostok had just arrived in San Francisco for sale to the mint.

While the Michigan Republican charged Treasury gold policy is "subsidizing" Russia, Senator Town-

Moscow Claims Foe Suffered Great Losses; Allies Rush Aid

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Feb. 8.—The Leningrad military headquarters reported tonight that Red army troops had occupied eight iron and concrete forts in Finland's Mannerheim Line and five others on the flank.

A headquarters communique said the eight forts taken in the Mannerheim Line were in the Hotinen area of the Summa district, near the western terminus of the line and some 20 miles south of Viipuri, immediate objective of the Russians on the Karelian Isthmus.

The other positions were reported to be in the sector between Lake Ladoga and Suvasijarvi, on the eastern end of the Finnish defense line.

In both actions, the Russians said the Finns suffered "great losses."

By John G. Norris

President Roosevelt was reliably reported to have discussed with State, War and Navy officials yesterday the advisability of selling surplus Army and Navy guns and other munitions to the anxiously arming Scandinavian nations.

Secretaries Hull, Woodring and Edison, Joseph C. Green, chief of the State Department munitions control division, and Col. James Burns, executive officer to Assistant War Secretary Louis Johnson, were called to the White House for what was afterwards described as a conference on the disposal of surplus goods here and abroad.

Mission-Made Inquiries

Informed circles said an official Norwegian mission now in the United States has made inquiries into buying artillery here if it can be obtained without delay.

The Army has hundreds of field guns and more than a million rifles stored since World War days which President Roosevelt has the legal power to declare surplus for sale here or to foreign nations, officials noted.

After the conference, Secretary Edison said the meeting had to do with the "whole question of disposition of surplus materials here and abroad" but that prospective plane orders or other individual items was not discussed.

Bertil Sees Roosevelt

The inclusion of the Navy Secretary in the conference suggested the possibility that his department may have some surplus munitions for disposal but there is little information available on the Navy's reserve stores.

Prince Bertil, son of the Swedish Crown Prince and head of his government's purchasing mission here, also called upon Mr. Roosevelt during the day. Like the Finnish, British, French and other missions here, the Swedish agents have been principally interested in American war planes.

Army Has 3,500 75's

The Army has approximately 3,500 75 mm. field guns, according to a report of the House Appropriations Committee last year. Of these, 1,866 had been adapted for high-speed towing by motor trucks, and those in actual use in the Army, about 313, had been modernized at a cost of $8,000 each to increase their range and field of fire.

Most of the 75s are of French design, but there are also several hundred English guns which have been in storage since the World War. There is also said to be in storage a few large guns firing 155 mm. shells which have been displaced by newer models.

Also on hand are approximately 1,850,000 Lee-Enfield rifles purchased during the World War, and about 950,000 Springfields which are gradually being replaced by the new semi-automatic Garand rifles.

Roosevelt Lauds Boy Scouts On Movement's 30th Birthday

President Roosevelt last night praised the Boy Scouts as a "generation trained in good citizenship" in a radio address from the White House opening the national celebration of Boy Scout Week.

As honorary president of the organization, Mr. Roosevelt greeted 1,000,000 Scouts and 8,000,000 Scout "alumni" at meetings all over the country celebrating the thirtieth anniversary of the movement.

Calling the boys' Scout program "democratic and therefore truly American," the President said, "God grant that it may ever remain so." Before the President's address Walter Head, of Detroit, president of the National Council of Boy Scouts, and Dr. James E. West, chief Scout executive, had praised the movement.

Mr. Roosevelt said that in 30 years "millions of American boys have found stirring and worthwhile adventure in scouting," and have shown by practical service their loyalty and patriotism.

Boy Scouts represent a cross-section of all American boys, from farms, seaports, cities, all races, creeds and economic groups, the President said.

"I like to think of scouting as a family group," he went on. "This is as it should be, for the United States is a family nation. The scouting movement extends the spirit of the family into the activities of the boy outside the home."

He emphasized the importance of the spiritual ideals of scouting, expressed in the twelfth Scout law. This law "constitutes an excellent basis for citizenship," he said, because "it affirms the importance of

Green Urges Roosevelt to Air Labor Row

Lewis Threw Peace Proposal Out Window, A. F. L. Chief Charges

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 8.—The A. F. of L. asked President Roosevelt today to disclose A. F. of L. and C. I. O. responses to his latest effort to end organized labor's internal strife, and let the public decide which faction now is blocking peace moves.

The Federation's executive council directly blamed C. I. O. Chieftain John L. Lewis for disrupting a continuation of peace efforts, while declaring the A. F. of L. always has been willing to work for a harmonious settlement.

William Green, Federation president, declared that he and Lewis, both separately and together, had told the President how far each was willing to go toward adjusting the controversy and that he thought the White House now should make the proposals public.

Telegraphs White House

Green said the executive council had dispatched the following telegram to the White House:

"The executive council of the American Federation of Labor now meeting in Miami respectfully requests that you make public the answers made by the American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O. to your appeal that peace negotiations be resumed.

"The executive council feels as a matter of simple justice that this information should be given to labor and to the people of our Nation so that responsibility for failure to resume peace negotiations as you requested shall be placed where it properly belongs."

Green also blamed Lewis for "throwing out the window" a peace proposal recently adopted by a joint A. F. of L.-C. I. O. committee, appointed at the suggestion of the White House, which proposal he said was acceptable to the A. F. of L. He said it called for the return of the nine original unions that left the A. F. of L., together with compensating adjustments, but Lewis withdrew from the negotiations last April and had not renewed them since.

Council Blames Lewis

"The responsibility for blocking progress toward the restoration of peace in organized labor therefore must fall upon one man, Mr. John L. Lewis," the council said.

"The working people of our country, the press and the public at large are asking why peace negotiations are not resumed? As a matter of simple justice, the truth should be told to them. The President of the United States can do it."

ALTMEYER

Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer of the Social Security Board, told House Democrats from Ohio yesterday that he would cooperate in new efforts to adjust Ohio's claim for $1,338,160 of old-age pension funds withheld in October, 1938.

Representatives Hunter and Harter, Democrats, said, however, that Altmeyer still was of the opinion that the funds could not be disbursed under the Social Security Act and suggested that they restudy the question and submit their proposals to him at a later meeting.

Hunter said that Altmeyer "denied responsibility" for the action of President Roosevelt in vetoing recently a bill to authorize payment of the claim upon certification by the board.

"I think," said Altmeyer, "that the President makes up his own mind in such matters."

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 8.—British public opinion, as measured by a special poll just completed in England, is strongly in favor of giving help to Finland but is anxious to put a limit on the extent of that aid. The overwhelming majority of voters in the study are for sending British arms to the Finns in their war against Russia, but are not in favor of sending British troops.

The issue of giving aid to the Finns has stirred wide discussion in England, as it also has in the United States. The amount of sentiment in the United States for a non-military American loan to the Finns was measured and reported by the American Institute of Public Opinion early this week. The British attitude toward Finland was measured by the British Institute of Public Opinion, an affiliate, through a cross-section survey in England, Scotland and Wales on the following issues:

"Do you approve or disapprove of Britain sending arms to help Finland?"

| Approve | 74% |
| Disapprove | 18 |
| No Opinion | 8 |

"Would you approve or disapprove of sending British troops to help Finland?"

| Approve | 33% |
| Disapprove | 50 |
| No opinion | 17 |

Ever since the early days of the Finnish-Russian war, Prime Minister Chamberlain and his government have lost no opportunity to convince the people of the importance of Finland's victory. British fighting planes and some antiaircraft and antitank guns and ammunition have been sent to the Finns.

If the sentiment found in today's survey continues, this policy of giving aid is not likely to meet with much public opposition, provided it stops short of sending actual British manpower.

The extent of support for arms shipments to Finland is well indicated by the fact that voters of the opposition parties, as well as government supporters, favor the proposition in the survey. More than 80 per cent of government voters said they approve arms shipments, and 60 per cent of opposition voters. Sending troops to Finland, however, is disapproved by both government and opposition voters, the former with a small vote and the latter by a large majority.

Public opinion in the United States, the American institute's surveys find, is strongly sympathetic to the Finnish cause. Six in every 10 favor a Government loan to Finland—one of the proposals suggested to help the Finns. In contrast to British sentiment, which favors giving direct material aid to the Finnish armies, American sentiment is opposed to granting Finland a loan if the money is used for war materials.

Surveys of public sentiment by the British institute have continued without interruption since the outbreak of war, and the results have been published in England without interference by the government or the censor—probably the first case in history where public opinion has been systematically measured and reported in a nation at war.

Sentiment on Finns In U. S. and Britain

Following are the results of recent polls in the United States by the American Institute of Public Opinion and in England by the British Institute concerning the Russian-Finnish war.

Finland, 88%; Russia, 1%; neutral or no opinion, 11%.

"Some members of Congress favor our Government lending Finland money to buy farm products and other nonmilitary supplies in this country. Others say this might get us into war. Do you Think the Government should lend money to Finland?"

Should lend, 58%; should not lend, 42%.

Those who replied "should lend" were asked:

"Would you favor the United States Government lending money to Finland for airplanes, arms and other war materials?"

SURVEYS IN BRITAIN

Zoning Board To Study Plan For Garages

Architects, Churches, Owners Oppose Space Requirement

Further study of a proposal to require garage space in future apartment houses and assembly places was ordered yesterday by the District Zoning Commission.

Opposed by spokesmen of local building owners, architects, churches and real estate groups, the proposal was discussed at public hearings on Wednesday and again yesterday before the commission.

A special committee consisting of John Nolen, jr., director of planning for the Park and Planning Commission; Robert H. Clouser, of the zoning commission staff and S. G. Lindholme, acting executive secretary of the zoning commission, will make a more detailed study on the proposal and present a report to the commission.

The zoning concession also deferred action on a petition to extend the first commercial area along a strip of land located on the north side of Albemarle street west of Wisconsin avenue, northwest. E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel, appeared on behalf of Sears Roebuck & Co., which has planned a retail store on this site. The petition was indorsed by the Friendship Heights Citizens Association but opposed by the Janney School P.-T. A.

The commission also approved an amendment to the regulations to permit erection of a private stable in a residential district, provided the stable is located 50 or more feet from the building line or any property line of the lot upon which the stable is erected. The old regulation permitted a stable if it was not less than 50 feet from any neighboring dwelling or the front building line of the lot.

Extend the residential, 60 "C" area district for 5431 Connecticut avenue northwest; extend the first commercial, 60, "C" area district for 1415 Twenty-second street northwest; extend the first commercial 90 "D" area district to include a lot located on the south side of Rhode Island avenue, west of Tenth street northeast; extend first commercial 60 "C" area district of property located on the east side of Bladensburg road, north of the right-of-way of the Pennsylvania Railroad northeast, and extend the residential "A" property located north of Bryant street, between Eighteenth and Twenty-second streets northeast.

Senate Efforts To Slash TVA Funds Beaten

Taft Sought to Cut Outlay $5,000,000; Other Savings Effected

The Congressional economy drive chalked up more below-Budget savings yesterday, sending one completed bill to the White House and clearing two others in House and Senate.

Trimmed $19,658,757 below the President's estimates, the conference report on the $252,340,776 emergency defense bill was passed by the House and sent to the President for signature. The House accepted $12,270,000 in Senate reductions below House figures.

The Senate passed and returned to the House the $1,139,783,528 Independent offices bill cut nearly $55,000,000 below budget estimates. But changes voted by the Senate raised the total $39,596,261 above House-approved figures.

The $107,225,660 State, Justice and Commerce Department measure completed its journey through the House, slashed $2,438,350 under the President's Budget estimates.

TVA Cuts Beaten

Two attempts to further whittle TVA appropriations were repulsed in the Senate before action was completed on the independent offices bill.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, sought to cut the TVA outlay from $40,000,000 to $35,000,000. Although Taft said "the whole question of whether this is to be an economy Congress" depended on the vote, the Senate rejected the cut, 57 to 18.

Likewise, Senator Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, failed in an effort to eliminate $1,000,000 for starting construction on a dam near Lenoir City, Tenn. His motion lost on a voice vote after Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, said the dam was the last link in the program to provide a 9-foot channel in the Tennessee River.

On request of Chairma Glass of the Appropriations Committee the Senate raised from $100,000 to $190,000 the appropriation for the New York customs house.

Refuses Cut in Census Funds

The House is expected to send the bill to Congress, where House conferees will attempt to shave the additional $39,000,000 voted by the Senate for the Maritime Commission and the $710,000 included for continuing the National Resources Planning Board.

In passing the State, Justice and Commerce Department bill, the House at the last minute refused 211 to 134 to approve a Republican motion for recommittaal to decrease by $2,166,000 a $17,850,000 fund for the 1940 census.

Two attempts to underwrite a Justice Department trust-busting drive against the dairy industry were defeated.

An amendment by Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, to provide $250,000 more for the Justice Department's antitrust division was defeated 44 to 27.

Representative Hull (Progressive), Wisconsin, next sought to increase the division's funds by $100,000. This was defeated 67 to 37.

Urban Exodus Revealed in Census Test

Rural Areas Found To Offer Advantages, Hopkins Points Out

A census test in two Indiana counties was described by Secretary Hopkins yesterday as furnishing evidence of an important movement of American population from city to country.

Making public the results of an experiment last August in St. Joseph and Marshall counties with questions which will be asked the whole Nation in April, Hopkins said the figures gave "an advance indication that the 1940 census may show similar trends in many cities."

"Good roads which enable residents to travel easily into town for shopping and work, cheaper housing in rural areas near cities and other advantages of surburban life are responsible for this trend," he said.

"Teen Age" Jobs Scarce

Scarcity of jobs for "teen age" persons was strikingly shown.

In the age group from 14 to 19 years, employment statistics gathered in the special census reveal that over one-third of the males and nearly 40 per cent of the females in the South Bend labor force were out of work and looking for a job, while 6.1 per cent of the males and 1.2 per cent of the females were on NYA and other emergency work projects.

Youths aged 20-24 years fared better in the labor market. Here, 21.1 per cent of the male and 14.2 per cent of the female workers of this age class were totally unemployed. Over one-half of the unemployed youths under 25 years had never held a full-time job last as long as one month.

Cities Show Decrease

Of the three cities in the two counties, two reported smaller populations in 1939 than in 1930, while both counties had over-all gains. South Bend's population dropped from 104,193 in 1930 to 100,087 in 1939; Mishawaka's fell from 28,630 to 28,008, while Plymouth gained from 5,290 to 5,509.

St. Joseph County as a whole, including South Bend and Mishawaka, increased from 160,033 to 160,201, and Marshall County, including Plymouth, increased from 25,077 to 25,857.

Another trend noted by Hopkins was an increase in the number of married women working or seeking work. The number of workers or would-be workers who were married women increased from 8.1 per cent in 1930 to 10.3 per cent.

Among persons desiring to work, 83.4 per cent of the males and 85.3 per cent of the females were employed in private industry or in regular Government jobs. Working on WPA, CCC and other relief jobs were 5.7 per cent of the males and 1.3 per cent of the females. All others were unemployed.

Morgan Heads Board to Hear Brodie, Murray

Maj. Tansey, Mrs. Mason Complete Group; Person, Bondy Alternate

Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the District Board of Tax Appeals, yesterday was named chairman of a three-man civilian trial board to hear the cases of Policemen Hubert E. Brodie and Leo Murray.

The Commissioners also named Maj. Patrick H. Tansey, assistant engineer commissioner, and Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, member of the Alcoholic Beverage Control. Alternates are Capt. John L. Person, assistant engineer commissioner, and Robert E. Bondy, welfare director. No date was set for the trial.

The demotion of the two policemen, who previously were detective sergeants, resulted recently in the delay of confirmation by the Senate of Commissioner Hazen. Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, had asked the commissioner for the reasons for the demotion of Brodie in a letter. A reply was sent to him that the action was taken "for the good of the service." The Senator said the reply was not "adequate" and held up confirmation of the commissioner until it was agreed to place the man on trial. Hazen was confirmed Wednesday by the Senate.

Nicotonic Acid Called Help In Science's War on Pellagra

Doctors Report Use of Thiamin in 60 Cases Shortens Siege, Indicates Advanced Stages of Disease Can Be Prevented

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Feb. 8.—New methods of diagnosing and arresting pellagra in its early stages or mild forms, by use of nicotinic acid, were outlined today by two scientists from the University of California and University of Cincinnati.

Pellagra, a nutritional disease caused by certain deficiencies, has been especially marked in the South. The studies, by Drs. Tom D. Spies, of Cincinnati, and Jacob Frostig, of the West Coast school, indicate that such diseases, particularly pellagra, may cause disintegration of the personality breakdown of the morale.

Writing in the American Journal of Medical Sciences, Philadelphia, the two analyzed symptoms and experiences of 60 victims of pellagra.

Findings to date, they added, point the way to greatly shortening the long period of ill health that precedes development of severe lesions and indicates that advanced stages of the disease can be prevented.

Noting that psycho-sensory disturbances occur in all special senses, the physicians wrote that patients complained that outward perceptual impressions such as noise and light "bothered" or "hurt" them, or made them "uneasy." Almost uniformly, victims were found to be "fidgety" with a tendency to tire easily.

Sleeplessness and sudden headaches of migrane severity were termed "special aids to this type of diagnosis."

The scientists reported large amounts of nicotinic acid or thiamin, administered under controlled conditions, were found to bring prompt relief and also aid in establishing correct diagnoses.

"Attention may be called to another important aspect of the problem," the paper continued. "It has been shown that developing pellagra often causes a rapid breakdown of personality. Men previously strong, courageous and enduring, become shaky, weary and apprehensive, even before the usually recognized clinical signs of pellagra develop."

Bandit Slashes Maid in Home Of Ex-Senator

'Wild-Eyed Burglar' Grapples With Servant In Reed Residence

Efforts to capture the so-called "wild-eyed burglar" were renewed last night after a colored man was reported to have entered the home of David A. Reed, former Senator from Pennsylvania, at 2222 S street northwest, and slashed a servant with a pocket knife.

From the description, police believe the intruder to be the same man who entered eight homes in the Northwest section in the last two weeks, terrorizing residents and robbing them.

Rose Hopkins, the Reed maid, told Detective R. E. Talbot that the man walked into her room on the second floor while she was preparing to retire Wednesday night. Warning her to make no sound, he ransacked a dresser. Miss Hopkins said she grabbed the burglar and screamed for help. The burglar pulled out a knife and cut her on the face. Her injuries were not serious.

Police said the man entered through a first floor window and apparently escaped by the same route. An inventory disclosed nothing was taken, they said.

Varney Denies At Police Trial He Hit Boy, 16

Lieutenant Says He 'Talked to Him as I Would to My Own Son'

A decision may be made today in the case of Frank A. Varney, police lieutenant, whose retirement has been held up while a police board considers a charge that Varney used unnecessary violence in the treatment of a 16-year-old boy.

In testimony yesterday, Varney denied the charge. Shortly after he testified, the trial ended and Inspector William G. Stott, chairman, said the board would meet at his office at Police Headquarters at 2 p. m., today to continue deliberation and if possible return a verdict to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Retirement of the 42-year-old lieutenant hinges on the outcome of the trial. A board of police surgeons had recommended that he be retired because of illness and approved the move for February 1. When the charge was placed the retirement was postponed.

Denies He Hit Boy

Varney was accused of cursing and striking Michael Sansalone, of 240 First street southwest, after the latter was taken into custody for playing football in the street. The boy's father complained to police officials that his son bore bruises and black eye when he was released from the Fourth Precinct Station November 19.

Taking the stand in his own defense yesterday, Varney testified that he did not strike the boy and that he only talked with him for a few minutes.

"I talked to him like I would talk to my own son," the lieutenant declared. "He appeared surly, sullen and contemptible and I told him I could either place a charge against him or not at my own discretion."

Varney told the board that the boy was released after Private F. J. Innocenti had talked to him and that while leaving the station house, the boy came to him and shook hands, smiling.

"He's Bad Boy," Mother Quoted

Michael was taken into custody, according to Varney, after he stood "in a defiant manner" in front of Varney's machine in Wonder's court southwest. When he learned the boy to be a juvenile, the lieutenant stated, he drove to Michael's home and spoke to his mother, Mrs. Rose Sansalone.

"He's supposed to be watching the store," Varney quoted Mrs. Sansalone as saying. "He's a bad boy. Lock him up; it will do him good." With that the lieutenant said he drove the boy to the station.

No charge was placed against Michael and it was not until the next morning that his father, Joseph Sensalone, a grocer, attempted to obtain a warrant for Varney, charging him with assault. When he was denied a warrant, he filed a complaint at Police Headquarters.

Varney lives at 934 G place northwest.

Churchmen Urge Social, Moral Unity

Catholic Bishops Favor Vocational Groups To Weld Mankind

The Administrative Board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference yesterday called for the restoration of a Christian social order based on "social and moral unity among the members of society."

Sixteen Archbishops and Bishops signed the statement, which was considered to be an answer to the second encyclical of Pope Pius XII, addressed to the Catholic hierarchy in the United States on November 11, 1939. In that encyclical the Pope called on the American people to "untie the knotty and difficult social question" by the application of the teaching of the Gospel.

In the statement made public yesterday the 16 prelates condemned alike extreme individualists and socialists. They advocated the establishment of "some form of guild of vocational groups which would bind men together in society according to their respective occupations" and the renewal of the Christian spirit.

State Ownership Denounced

Signers of the statement were Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch, of Chicago, chairman of the administrative board; Archbishops John Gregory Murray, of St. Paul, and Joseph F. Rummel, of New Orleans; Bishops John Mark Gannon, of Erie; Hugh C. Boyle, of Pittsburgh; Francis C. Kelley, of Oklahoma-Tulsa; John B. Peterson, of Manchester; Edwin V. O'Hara, of Kansas City; John A. Duffy, of Buffalo; Edward F. Hoban, of Rockford; Emmet M. Walsh, of Charleston; Karl J. Alter, of Toledo; Cahles Hubert LeBlond, of St. Joseph; Francis P. Keough, of Providence; Walter A. Foery, of Syracuse, and Bartholomew J. Eustace, of Camden.

The prelates condemned "extreme individualists or the so-called school of economic liberalism" as being "liberal only to the extent that they wish to be liberated from all social responsibility."

They continued, "it is manifestly impossible to expect good economic order if wages, prices, working conditions and the public good are left to chance or to the haphazard methods of so-called free enterprise."

The theories of state ownership of property advanced by Socialists and Communists were denounced as both impractical and destructive of human rights.

Society Broken Up

"Persecution is the logical and inevitable result of such economic dictatorship," the statement said.

Claiming that society has been "broken into fragments each seeking selfish interests instead of the common good," the prelates found a remedy in autonomous vocational groups, each embracing a whole industry or profession, to be formed with the encouragement and assistance of the state.

The statement affirmed the right of private property, but emphasized the social responsibility of ownership. The civil authority must see that wealth is equitably distributed, the prelates said.

Abuse of ower by both capital and organized labor was blamed in the statement for social disorder, and the theory that wages should be determined solely by supply and demand was denounced. The prelates indorsed the principle of collective bargaining.

"Security of the workingmen as against unemployment, old age, sickness, accident and death, must be frankly accepted as a social responsibility of industry jointly with society," the statement said.

Charity Needed

"The distribution of the burden justly between the various groups must be determined first through mutual council and honest agreement between the employers and the employes, and secondly through the regulation of Government."

In the spiritual order the remedy advanced by the prelates was a "frank and sincere return to the teaching of the Gospel." Too much attention is today being paid to justice, and not enough to charity, they said.

"We need justice without doubt, but we also need charity if we are put our lives in harmony with God's plan and promote that spirit of benevolence which will lift the burdens not only from the backs but also from the souls of men."

Finns Repulse 250,000 Reds At 4 Points

100,000 Russians Centered on Summa; Parachutists Seized

By Thomas F. Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki, Feb. 8.—For the seventh successive day Finland's defenders today beat back Russian soldiers a quarter of a million strong attacking at four main points along a 500-mile ice-bound front in the biggest offensive of the war, Finnish army reports stated.

Declaring the Russians apparently were using every possible weapon, the Finns said that Russian saboteurs, disguised in Finnish uniforms, had been dropped from airplanes by parachute behind the Finnish lines. Several were captured, the Finns said.

Finnish advices from the front indicated Russia's 250,000 men were attacking as follows:

Approximately 100,000, in the battle centering at Summa on the Isthmus of Karelia, in southeast Finland.

Another 100,000 northeast of Lake Ladoga.

Several thousands at Suomussalmi, approxiately 200 miles further north at the eastern end of Finland's narrow "waist."

Forty-five thousand or more in positions at Salla, 150 miles north of Suomussalmi.

No one here would estimate the Finnish strength or Finnish losses on any front beyond the statement that both figures were "far fewer" than those for the Russians.

Mean to Crush Line

(The total Finnish armed forces were authoritatively estimated at 400,000 at the start of the war. In Moscow it was disclosed Thursday that Admiral Tributz, commander of the Soviet navy in the Baltic, had declared that Russia was determined to continue her offensive against Finland until the Finnish forces holding the Mannerheim Line, the main Finnish defense line, are annihilated.)

Nowhere, according to the Finns, did the Russians make an important advance. "Some thousands" of Russians died on Tuesday alone in the isthmus fighting, today's high command communique said.

Battles were reported continuing today particularly on the isthmus, northeast of Lake Ladoga around Kuhmo, and, for the first time in three weeks, at Suomussalmi.

Offensive Falls Short

It was at Suomussalmi that the Russian One Hundred Sixty-third and Forty-fourth Divisions met disaster earlier in the war in attempts to drive across the Finnish "waist" to the head of the Gulf of Bothnia to cut Finland in two and check overland shipment of supplies from Sweden.

The Russian troops at Suomussalmi apparently were from a regiment sent up as reinforcements after the rout of these two divisions.

Artillery, tank and air units supported the attackers' infantry, but the Finns said, the Soviet offensive nevertheless still fell short.

New Champion Skins 5 Muskrats In 2½ Minutes

Cambridge, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—Hip-booted Curtiss Insley, a farmer and trapper, skinned five marsh rabbits in 2 minutes, 38 seconds yesterday to win the first "National muskrat skinning contest."

The 48-year-old American Legionnaire from Sewards, Dorchester County, outskinned 24 other contestants from Maryland, Virginia, Delaware and New Jersey to take first prize of $50.

In the special contest for the three women entries, Mrs. Sadie Keene, young farmer's wife from Golden Hill, won $20 for skinning the animals in 3.47 minutes. Mrs. Curtiss Insley added to her husband's laurels by winning second prize of $10 in 6.15 minutes.

Carelessness with the muskrat's nose—they tweaked it off—disqualified Frank Shepherd and Richard Horner, co-champion skinners from Hancock Bridge, Salem County, N. J.

Muskratting is a profession started early in life and just to show how adept are the youngsters of Dorchester County, Arthur Mills, 5, Golden Hill farmer's son, skinned his one marsh rabbit in 4 minutes flat. Trappers took up a purse of $1 for him.

13 Forts Captured, Russians Claim

Press dispatch said.

[These sources said such reports might have originated from the fact that some Russian detachments succeeded in advancing a few hundred yards. However, it was said these detachments were "destroyed" and that nowhere had Red army units forced the Finns to retire.—Editor's note.]

Military Objectives Bombed

The Leningrad communique stated:

"February 8: Hostilities restricted chiefly to activities of scouts. Clashes of advanced infantry units, which took place the last few days on the Karelian Isthmus, resulted in the occupation by Soviet troops of the fortified area of Hotinen in the Summa district with eight iron and concrete artillery forts.

"In the sector between Ladoga Lake and Suvasijarvi Soviet troops captured five defensive iron and concrete artillery forts. In both cases the enemy suffered great losses.

"Soviet aviation bombed military objectives."

Allies Rush Aid

London, Feb. 8.—Great Britain and France tonight rushed to fortify Finland with armed aid and man power as diplomatic reports from Helsinki said that the Finnish army is "suffering reverses" in its attempts to beat back the Russian invaders.

The extent of the reported "reverses" was not indicated, but British military experts believed that the Russians would be unable at this time to force a decision in their eight-day-old offensive against the Mannerheim Line on the Karelian Isthmus.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain told the House of Commons today that further British aid is en route to Finland, and asserted that the Finns' valiant defense of their homeland "has evoked the admiration of the world."

Urges Naval Attack on Russia

Meanwhile, an outstanding British military leader of the World War, Gen. Sir Hubert Gough, urged the Allies to make a naval attack on Russia on the Arctic coast of Finland, because "though we are not at war with Russia, she is at war with us."

The first British volunteers for Finland, including many retired army officers, are expected to leave for the Finnish fighting fronts next week.

France is relaying on to Finland numbers of Italian warplanes which Germany had refused to allow to cross Reich territory en route to Finland, for fear of rousing Russian antagonism.

Some British fighting planes already are said to be in service with the Finnish air force.

Italian Volunteers Aided

It was stated reliably tonight that Britain and France, in addition to facilitating the shipment of Italian planes to Finland, are prepared to help large numbers of Italian volunteers to reach Finland.

(The Finnish Minister to Italy, Eero Jaernefelt, told the United Press in Rome tonight that more than 5,000 Italians had volunteered at his legation for service in the Finnish army or air force but that thus far no visas had been granted to them although he added with a smile: "Of course, I have heard from unofficial sources that there are quite a number of Italians serving with the Finnish forces but I have no idea how they got there."

A number of prominent Britons are helping in an ordganization which, under supervision of the Finnish legation here, is arranging for the departure of the first British volunteers.

British military circles believe that the Finns, given sufficient foreign aid, will be able to surmount their present difficulties and that the real crisis in Finland will not come for several months.

French Ready For Red Thrust In Near East

Announce 275,000 Troops Are Massed, Reject Protest

By Roy P. Porter,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Feb. 8.—France tonight gave Russia a warning glimpse of the French manpower which stands ready to defend the Near East against a Red army thrust, turned down a Soviet protest against seizure of Russian documents in a Paris police raid and saw a Polish expeditionary force off for the Finnish battlefields.

The day's developments:

Authorized persons asserted France had 275,000 troops concentrated in the Near East as a precaution against the possibility, among others things, of any Russian military activity there or against the Balkans.

(After publication by American newspapers, a London dispatch that the total Allied concentration in the Near East numbered about 500,000 men was canceled by the British censor.)

Protest Turned Down

Reliable reports said the government rejected a protest by Soviet Ambassador Jakob Surits against a police raid Monday on the Russian commercial offices.

An expeditionary force of Polish veterans, augmented by Polish-American volunteers, was sent to Finland.

French parliamentary support for Finland spread to the Senate, where the Democratic Left approved a motion congratulating the French government on the "important effort it has accomplished in favor of Finland."

Phillippe Roques, propaganda chief of the ministry of colonies, wrote in the publication, Our Fight, that French colonies by the end of 1940 will have sent 700,000 native and colored troops to bolster France's war machine, leaving behind an additional 2,000,000 reserves. These figures include only troops from territories under the ministry of colonies, and exclude North Africa and Syria.

Prepared For Threats

The source which told of the French troop concentration in the Near East said they were so placed to "prepare for all Russian or German threats in the Balkans or the Caucasus."

Britain and Egypt also have extensive forces in the Near East—the British in Egypt, where defense of the Suez Canal Zone is one of their duties, Palestine and elsewhere.

The French concentration—centering in Syria—is commanded by Gen. Maxime Weygand, 72-year-old former chief of the French general staff, who arrived in Cairo, Egypt, yesterday with Admiral Jean Esteva, commander in chief of the French Mediterranean Fleet, to inspect British and Egyptian defenses.

Previous French statements have made it clear that should the war spread to the Near East, Gen. Weygand, who was the right-hand man of Marshal Foch in the later stages of the World War, would command the Allied forces.

Neutrals Conscript Armies

The Caucasus Mountains stretch across Soviet territory between the Black and Caspian Seas on a path leading to Turkey and Syria. Turkey has mutual assistance pacts with Britain and France.

(Coincidentally, a Budapest dispatch said neutral nations of southeastern Europe would have conscript armies on a war footing by mid-March as a precautionary measure against any springtime threat to their peace.)

On the French domestic front, reliable sources said the government refused to consider the Soviet Ambassador Surits' protest against the raid on the Russian commercial offices in which three men were held temporarily and documents were seized.

The envoy made his representations Monday, demanding the release of the men and return of the documents. Basis of the rejection was said to be that the men did not enjoy diplomatic immunity nor did the offices ever have extraterritorial privileges.

Communists Outlawed

The cabinet last September 26 outlawed the Communist Party by decree and forbade propaganda of the Communist International.

Debate on a proposal for a secret session of Parliament to discuss national defense questions has been scheduled for Friday morning by the council of presidents of political groups in the Chamber of Deputies.

On the Western Front the high command in its regular evening communique reported "activity of our patrols at various parts of the front."

Speed Finn Bonds, Senate Asks SEC

send (Republican), of Delaware, rose in the Senate to repeat his charges that Russian profits from American gold sales are more than offsetting any contemplated aid to Finland.

Embargo Held Overdue

Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, criticized the Administration "for failure to embargo sale of arms to the Soviet months before it did," contending the aircraft moral embargo came too late to spare Finnish cities from bombing.

After failing Wednesday by only 3 votes to cut off the salary of the Ambassador to Russia and thus indirectly break Soviet relations, the House yesterday allowed the State-Justice-Commerce departmental bill to pass without pressing the test to a roll call vote. Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, failed to gain recognition for a recommit motion on the issue.

Norris Opposes Bond Plea

The Harrison resolution, aimed at opening the American private money market to any bond issue Finland may float, received Senate approval after more than two hours of brisk debate.

Only three Senators—Danaher, of Connecticut, and Frazier, of North Dakota (Republicans), and Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, voted against it.

In amendments from the floor, Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, changed his measure from a concurrent resolution, requiring two-house approval, to a simple Senate resolution. He further modified it to call for swift SEC "consideration" of any bond issue application, in lieu of directing the commission to register such an issue. Chairman Jerome Frank of the SEC already has said the commission would register the bonds, providing all facts were made public.

As approved, the resolution read: "It is the sense of the Senate that the Securities and Exchange Commission should expedite the consideration of applications for the registration of any bonds, securities or other obligations issued by the Republic of Finland or any of its political subdivisions."

The debate saw Senate Majority Leader Barkley fighting beside Harrison for passage. Opposing action, Senator Norris termed it "bad precedent" for the Senate to bring pressure on a Government commission, and Danaher argued it would place this country "in an unneutral position." Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, called it "an empty gesture."

Replying to O'Mahoney, Barkley said the action would amount to "a resolution of sympathy," but more than that was "a combination of sympathy and aid." He said it would afford an opportunity for Americans to invest their own money in the Finnish cause.

Not an Investment

Harrison said it was not his intention to "hold out any false hopes to Finland." Pointing out that Finnish bonds have dropped to around 45, he said Americans are not expected to buy up the proposed issue as "a business investment," but rather out of sympathetic motives. Wealthy individuals favoring Finland now are "taxed for giving," he said, pointing out that any losses from the Finnish bonds would be deductible in computing income taxes.

Madden Backs Fight on Labor Act Changes

Tells Inquiry He Made No Effort to Halt Drive by Board Aides

By the Associated Press

Chairman J. Warren Madden of the National Labor Relations Board said yesterday that the board and its employes are entitled to try to organize public and labor sentiment against changes in the Wagner Labor Act under which the board operates.

He told the House committee investigating his agency that he made no attempt to stop an "unofficial" campaign among the board's regional directors directors to rouse local American Federation of Labor unions against Wagner Act amendments sponsored by A. F. of L. President William Green and other ranking federation officials.

He also defended the board's right to lobby for increased appropriations from Congress.

Committee Counsel questioned Madden at length about the employment by the board of two temporary trial examiners who were seeking steady jobs with the C. I. O.

Ceased to be Employed

The two examiners were J. Raymond Walsh, Harvard University professor and author of "C. I. O., industrial unionism in action," and James G. Ewell.

Concerning Walsh, Madden said the board ceased to employ him after it learned the nature of his book on the C. I. O.

Madden volunteered the information that during Walsh's employment, the board also had as a trial examiner a certain Waldo Holden, who he said "came straight from the office of William Green."

Committee Counsel Edmund M. Toland produced letters by Ewell or about him, tending to show that the Democratic National Committee had been interested in a job for Ewell.

Wolf

"This correspondence seems to show that one can be enthusiastic for the C. I. O. and at the same time have very powerful political support, and still lost his place with the board," Madden remarked.

The anti-amendment campaign among NLRB regional directors was shown to have been started by Benedict Wolf, New York attorney and former secretary of the board, in a letter to all of the regional men except Nathaniel S. Clark in Milwaukee. Wolf reportedly stated that he hesitated to write to clark because of the latter's "A. F. L. friends."

British Labor Bars Treating With Nazis

Complete Restitution To Poles and Czechs Is Peace Condition

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 8.—Great Britain's labor millions, through the national executive of the Labor Party, declared tonight unequivocally against peace negotiations with any Nazi government in Germany.

A document giving the war purposes and peace aims of the chief opposition British party demanded, as a condition for ending the war, completed acts of restitution and freedom for Poles and Czecho-Slovaks. Austria should be allowed to choose whether to be in or outside the Reich, it said.

The statement, drafted by the supreme governing body of the party, is to be submitted to the party's national conference in May for debate and adoption as labor's policy in this country.

Party Assails Russia

Despite the party's long advocacy of improvement of British-Russian relations, the labor pronouncement condemned Russia's "unprovoked attack on Finland in shameless imitation of Nazi technique."

It said "we should regard extinction of the free Finnish democracy as an intolerable disaster for civilization."

Hugh Dalton, party spokesman, said the statement was more specific on war and peace aims than any by the Chamberlain government.

No Peace With Nazis

On this point the statement said: "The Labor Party is convinced that the Allies ought not enter into peace negotiations except with a German government which has not merely promised but actually performed certain acts of restitution. In view of the experience of recent years no one can trust a Nazi government honestly to perform such acts or to abstain from future aggression.

"Restitution must include freedom for the Polish and Czecho-Slovak peoples. No promise of independence for these peoples will suffice unless accompanied by the withdrawal of German forces and police."

Against Dividing Germany

Explaining the absence of any reference to the Russian-occupied part of Poland, Dalton said Britain was not at war with Russia and the party decided against trying to define now post-war territorial adjustments.

Text of Hull's Letter on Relations With Russia

Following is the text of the letter from Secretary Hull to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on American relations with Russia:

I have received your letter of January 19, 1940, inviting such comment as I may feel disposed to make on Senate Resolution 219 of January 18, 1940, in which the President was requested to report to the Senate, if not incompatible with public interest, whether the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics had fulfilled the obligations contained in the agreements entered into between that government and this Government on November 16, 1933.

Although the agreements of November 16, 1933, between the two governments were concluded simultaneously with the establishment of diplomatic relations between them, the maintenance of diplomatic relations has not been made "wholly contingent," as the wording of the resolution would appear to indicate, on the fulfillment by the Soviet government of the obligations set forth in these agreements.

Whenever this Government has cause to believe that another government has failed to live up to agreements with it, it is accustomed to make use of the very channels which exist by virtue of diplomatic relations, in order to bring this failure to the attention of the other government, to endeavor to effect an adjustment of resultant divergencies of views, and to attempt to prevent similar differences from taking place in the future.

Violated Obligations in 1935

During the years which have elapsed since the establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, this Government on several occasions has had ground to believe that the Soviet government was not fully living up to the obligations undertaken at the time of the establishment of such relations. On such occasions this Government has made appropriate representations to the Soviet government. In certain instances these representations have yielded constructive results; in others, they have disclosed divergencies in the interpretation of the agreements in question.

It was the opinion of this Government in August, 1935, that the Soviet government had violated its obligations not to interfere in the internal affairs of the United States when it permitted the All World Congress of Communist International to convene in Moscow.

Accordingly, on August 25, 1935, the American Ambassador to the Soviet Union addressed a note of protest to the acting people's commissar for foreign affairs.

On August 27, 1935, the acting people's commissar for affairs presented a note in reply to the Ambassador in which it was denied that the Soviet government had taken upon itself obligations of any kind with regard to the Communist International.

Representations on Arrest

The Department of State on August 31, 1935, issued a statement in which it maintained that the language of the agreement between the two governments "irrefutably covers activities of the Communist International." A copy of this statement is attached hereto as inclosure three. There has been no further exchange of views of communications on this subject between the two governments.

In connection with the work of the American Embassy in Moscow regarding the protection of American citizens and interests in the Soviet Union, a number of cases have come to the attention of this Government involving the arrests or detention of American citizens by the Soviet authorities. In the opinion of this Government, the Soviet government in the handling of some of these cases was not living up strictly to its undertakings relative to the rights of citizens of the United States to legal protection.

Following representations made by this Government, the American citizens under arrest were eventually released, and at the present time, so far as this Government is aware, no American citizens are under detention in the Soviet Union except a number whom the Soviet government considers to be citizens of the Soviet Union rather than the United States.

This Government has not had occasion to make representations to the Soviet government for violations of any other obligations assumed by the Soviet government in the agreements of November 16, 1933.

In addition to concluding certain agreements at the time of the establishment of diplomatic relations, the American and Soviet governments exchanged views with regard to methods of settling all questions of indebtedness and claims outstanding between them.

This exchange permitted the hope for a speedy and satisfactory solution of these questions. Subsequent negotiations, however, terminated unsuccessfully. On January 31, 1933, the Department of State issued to the press a statement, pointing out that "there seems to be scarcely any reason to doubt that the negotiations which seemed promising at the start must now be regarded as having come to an end."

Thyssen Plans To Give Inside Story of Hitler

Exiled German Magnate Intends to Demand Constitutional Rights

Copyright by New York Times

Locarno, Switzerland, Feb. 8.—Neither Germany nor Chancellor Hitler have heard the end of Fritz Thyssen, who until November was head of the Ruhr steel and iron trust and that country's greatest industrialist.

Here in this Swiss resort the magnate who, more than any man except the late President Paul von Hindenburg, was responsible for putting Hitler in power, told the New York Times that the full record of his role in nazidom and his relations with the Fuehrer will be published, but that whatever happens he remains a member of the Reichstag and intends to demand his rights under the constitution.

"The time has not yet come to make public the documents I possess," said Herr Thyssen. "I am the guest of the Swiss people and I cannot embarass them by playing politics while I am accepting their hospitality. Moreover, my country after all is at war and I shall do nothing to make it hard for Germany. . . .

Expects to Visit U. S.

"I may be prepared to speak after I leave Switzerland, which will be in a few months, for I expect to go to the United States for the meeting of the Steel Institute in May. . . .

"However, I have not by any means given up hopes of returning to Germany. I am still a member of the Reichstag, since my five-year term has not expired, and don't forget the constitution has not changed. Hitler does not honor it, but it exists. Mussolini at least changed the constitution and then abided by the changes he made, but Hitler has not altered it. . . .

"It is true they confiscated my property in order to punish me for not agreeing with their policies, but my person should be inviolate. . . ."

It was quite clear that Herr Thyssen felt President von Hindenbeurg never would have put Chancellor Hitler in power if he had known what the result was going to ge. But Germany's most important exile would not go so far as ot say so categorically. In the same way, he kept insisting he was going back to Germany, but indicated it could not be while Chancellor Hitler was in power.

Sees End of Hitler Regime.

He evidently believes the end of Hitler's regime is not so very far off; at least it is obvious he expects to survive the Fuehrer as a force in German affairs.

He gave the impression that the one thing which made him break with the chancellor was the pact with the very powers of communism and revolution which led him to back Herr Hitler in 1933.

The industrialist spoke with deep concern about what is happening in Germany and the whole of Europe now. "The poor are getting poorer," he said. "The level of existence is sinking."

"You know how to live there," he said, "and how to make your government the instrument of your Constitution," he said of the United States.

'Shuttle' Ferry Called Essential To Talbot County

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP).—A Talbot County delegation told the public service commission today that discontinuance of "shuttle" ferry service between Romancoke and Claiborne would injure their industrial life, depreciate their properties and mark their vicinity as an "out of the way place."

Confronted with figures showing the shuttle service is losing about $35,00 a year, the Shore men argued that changes in the service might result in more passengers, but at any rate the ferry should be continued as a public service.

Discontinuance of the shuttle service has been proposed as a means of helping to lower rates on the Annapolis-Matapeake service. Revenues from the latter service are used to operate the Romancoke-Claiborne service.

The hearing was part of a broad investigation the commission is making into rates and charges of the Claiborne-Annapolis Ferry Co.

Fighting Rages On All 5 Fronts Of Finland

Scribes in Dugout Eat Reindeer Stew As Bombs Pound Towns

By Harold Denny
Copyright by New York Times

With the Finnish Army on Arctic Front (via Ivalo), Feb. 8.—Fighting again has broken out on this northernment battlefield in hitsory and so now active warfare again is raging on all five Finnish fronts from the Gulf of Finland to the Arctic Ocean.

The main motives for these attacks presumably are to wear down Finnish resistance, for the Russians can hardly hope to score any strategic success this winter. But the Russians have unlimited manpower, can afford to spend ammunition in the hope of exhausting the Finnish troops while their air raids harass the civilian population.

Seek to Push Finns Back

New hostilities in the Arctic are limited thus far to attacks by large Russian patrols. The latest is a new Russian attempt to drive the Finns further back along the Arctic highway to make their base at Petsamo more secure. For the Finn patrols now slip around the Russian flanks and have several times penetrated to the Arctic Ocean more than 100 miles in the Russian rear. They have raided Petsamo itself and their repeated lightning attacks on the Russian supply columns and their firing of Russian depots are a constant menace to the Russian slender line of communications.

Here, as elsewhere, the Finns are holding at bay large Russian forces. A whole Russian division is holding the road and a front just ahead of us. The Russians are combining their infantry attacks with intense air activity from Rovaniemi to the Finnish front lines north of Nautsi.

For the past three nights the Russians have extended their night bombing attacks to the whole northern area. Soviet planes are dropping parachute flares, lighting up the country for miles around.

Exhausting Experience

It was to an accompaniment of such bombing that a small group of correspondents came up to this front this week. Besides myself were Miss Virginia Cowles, of New York, correspondent of the London Sunday Times, and Desmond Tighe, of Reuters. We called ourselves the "Nature Study Class" as we left Rovaniemi by automobile at 3 a. m. on Tuesday, but instead we have gone through the most exhausting 48 hours that any of us ever has experienced.

For on Saturday the Russians got down the bombing in earnest with their fighter planes and machine gunning the road. We spent much of the time hiding in ditches and forests, occasionally in air raid shelters, chilled to the bone in a temperature of 30 below zero. We got almost no sleep, and we went without coffee one day because there wasn't time to prepare it between air raid alarms. Our only real meal was at Ivalo where in a warm kitchen of an inn we ate reindeer stew. We paid for this by having to spend the next two hours in a sub-zero dugout listening to the dropping of bombs on the village outskirts by Soviet planes.

3,500 Bombs Dropped

The villagers crowded the dugout, old people sitting silent while young girls chatted and laughed. Villagers told us that Ivalo had had five air raids in the preceeding 24 hours and that 3,500 bombs had been dropped in and around the village since January 14. On that day two girls were killed but there have been no casualties since.

On the night before, we learned, the village of Inari had been bombed with the aid of flares and the church and parsonage was set afire. Besides these two buildings the village has only three stores and two dwellings. The Russians had dropped 5,000 bombs that night from Inari to a point 6 miles south without hitting anything.

These totals of bombs dropped sound exaggerated but the great majority were small fragmentation bombs and incendiary bombs of little weight so they may be right. At one place yesterday where the air raid alarm sent us scurrying from our car to hide under fir trees one bomber out of eight flying up the road dived down to bomb and machine-gun a lone telephone linesman on a bicyle, but they did not him him.

Forced to Lie on Bare Ice

Leaving the inn near midnight we motored on up toward the front and ran into another air raid alarm, sentries herded us towards a low culvert into which we dived and lay on the bare ice. It was too cold to stay long. We crawled out to find that the northern lights had flared up meanwhile and the whole sky was shimmering with its streamers and hanging curtains of pale fire. Two airplanes were dropping flares over Ivalo too distant for us to hear their bombs. They circle back over us on their return journey. Each plane dropped one big bomb over the front lines before hurrying home.

When we reached a forward headquarters we were not permitted to proceed further. Over hot coffee before a grateful fire in the farmhouse a captain told us that the battle had just ended in another Finnish victory.

Large forces of Russians had come over on skiis to test the strength of the Finnish lines. A Finnish patrol had ended the battle by striking them on the flank and rear.

President Sent Defense Bill, Cut 19 Million

Conferees Approve Measure Calling For $252,340,776

Congress yesterday completed action on a $252,340,776 emergency national defense appropriation bill and sent it to President Roosevelt.

The House adopted a conference report, previously approved by the Senate, cutting the measure $19,658,757 below budget estimates. The bill provides funds for neutrality enforcement and the expansion of the armed services ordered because of the European war.

Meanwhile, Secretary of War Woodring ordered 10,450 additional troops south to participate in the largest scale maneuvers in peacetime Army history. They will join some 56,500 soldiers already in the field at several points getting ready for the war games.

Among the units ordered South is the Fifth Regiment of Engineers from nearby Fort Belvoir, Va. 9 total of 852 officers and men will leave the post early in April for drill grounds in Louisiana. They will be gone more than two months.

Woodring announced the War Department had decided to hold the large war games in an area in Louisiana and eastern Texs. The Angelin, Sabine and Kisatchie National Forests and surrounding country will be the scene of mock battles between the first organized peacetime corps the Nation has ever had.

In curtailing the emergency defense measure, the House cut about $7,000,000, and the Senate the rest. The funds will pay for the Army war games, the enlargement of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, and Federal Bureau of Investigation staff ordered last September, new warplanes and the cost of operating the Atlantic Coast neutrality patrol.

Firemen Win Hide-and-Seek In Dumbwaiter

Mary Louise Shaefer, 5, and her sister, Anna, 4, were playing hide-and-seek yesterday in their home at 1922 Sixteenth street northwest, and they decided to hide together from their grandmother, Mrs. John Shea.

They climbed into the dumbwaiter. The dumbwaiter began to move, and before either could say, "You're it!" they were suspended between the third and fourth floors.

Hearing their cries, Mrs. Shea tried to lift the dumbwaiter. It was too heavy. She asked a neighbor for help. Police were called, and in five minutes the Fire Rescue Squad had hoisted the two children to safety. They emerged smiling.

"We had fun," said Anna.

House Group Votes to Keep Trade Pacts

Means Committee Poll, 14-10, Follows Party Lines Strictly

By the Associated Press

A resolution to continue the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act unchanged for three years cleared its first legislative hurdle yesterday, receiving approval of the House Ways and Means Committee by a strictly partisan vote: 14 Democrats for, and 10 Republicans against.

House consideration was scheduled tentatively for the week beginning February 19. Democrats and Republicans were said to have agreed on 12 hours general debate.

One Democratic committee member, Representative Disney, of Oklahoma, voted "present." He was dissatisfied because the committee did not adopt an amendment he proposed which would have forbidden the State Department to lower excise taxes on oil, coal, copper or lumber when negotiating trade agreements. His amendment lost, 14 to 11.

There has been some criticism from oil-producing States of the Venezuelan agreement which reduced the excise tax on imports of a limited quantity of oil.

Representative Crowther (Republican), New York, attempted to insert a provision requiring Senate and House concurrence in the agreements negotiated by the State Department.

Defeated on this by a strictly partisan vote, Crowther then offered an amendment providing for Senate-House concurrence, but specifying they should vote on each treaty within 45 days after its submission. It lost, too, by a 15-10 vote.

Disney said he presumed a last-minute letter from Hull to the committee "had weight" with the committee on the vote rejecting his amendment. Other members said Hull wrote that careful watch would be kept of Venezuelan oil imports and if there was any flood of Venezuelan oil here, the United States would take full advantage of the pact's escape clause.

That clause permits either party to the agreement to abrogate it if the other violates its terms.

The trade law now is scheduled to expire June 12. Leaders on the Democratic side were free in their predictions that the House would approve continuance of the program by a wide margin.

Loudoun Group Urges Closing Of 3 Schools

Leesburg, Va., Feb. 8.—Three high schools in Loudoun County (one at Leesburg, one in the Lincoln-Purcellville area, and one at Lovettsville), instead of six as now operating, were recommended in a report by a survey committee on long-range planning for Loudoun County high schools, which was released today by Superintendent of Schools O. L. Emerick.

The committee was composed of F. F. Jenkins, State director administration, finance and research; Raymond V. Long, State director school buildings, and R. C. Haydon, superintendent schools, Prince William County. They recommend that the high schools at Round Hill, Aldie and Ashburn be consolidated with the high school at Leesburg, and in the Lincoln-Purcellville area, and that as soon as local conditions permit, the high school work at Lovettsville be consolidated with the two schools in the central part of the county.

The report shows that there are 3,422 fewer people in Loudoun County than in 1890, that the loss in population was confined to the magisterial districts of Broad Run, Jefferson and Lovettsville.

The findings of the survey committee will be presented to the school board at an open meeting on February 13.

VALENTINE PARTIES. Next week your Valentine will expect you to take her to a Valentine party. Nobby Valentine fiestas are being cooked up all around town. Here are some of them.

Metronome Room. The Valentine party in Metronome is becoming a hardy annual (fourth consecutive year) and will blossom out again with balloons, noisemakers, fancy hats and favors. Eddy Brandt and his boys are wrestling up an appropriate score.

La Salle Versailles. An elegant Valentine program will include wining and dining in L'Escargot and stepping into the Versailles for dancing. There'll be pretty favors and the Valentine theme will be carried into a menu that will include a red-and-white dessert. Valentine music, too, if Maestro Burrus Williams can find any.

Anchor Room. The singing debut of piquant Virginia Pollard, of Virginia, will be the special St. Valentine's Day treat in the Anchor Room. Virginia's voice has been praised by such authorities as Mme. Schumann-Heink and John Boles. Last year she received a Paramount contract which she was unable to fulfill because of illness.

NEW RAINBOW GREETER. If you get around Miami or Cleveland very much, you'll probably say, "Well! Hello, Jerry!" when you enter the Rainbow Room . . . For "Jerry" Weaver, new greeter in the Rainbow Room, used to commute each year between Cleveland's Statler and the Fleetwood in Miami.

SOCIETY DANCER. A new society entertainer, Merle Rutherford, of New York and Washington, will dance in the Shoreham Blue Room next week. She is known as a really shining stepper, has appeared successfully in London's Covent Garden and Shepherd's in Cairo. Her home in this sector is the noted Holland House of Alexandria . . . Prince and Princess Selandia will specialize in Finnish folk dances next week. Gene Archer is also held over . . . True and Trudy Wilkins (see picture above) will do some handsome hand balancing.

THAT O'DONNELL OPENING. Publicist Malcolm Lamborne calls up to say that O'Donnell's Sea Grill may open in a week, or it may be ten days or two weeks. The suspense is killing, but in the meantime we we can keep on going to the present O'Donnell's which, we hear, is going to be kept open for some time after the opening of the new sea grill.

MAYFLOWER PICTURE. Adelaide Moffett, society chanteuse, with Mrs. Lyle Wilson. Adelaide is on her way to Palm Beach but already has a velvety tan acquired on an earlier trip to Florida. Dick Koons and the boys play "How High the Moon," hit tune from "Two For the Show," new musical just opened in Boston and due in Manhattan in a few days . . . Dick seems very uncertain when his engagement is going to crystallize into a wedding.

Don't ask us how they posed this one. It's True and Trudy Wilkins, who'll be in the Shoreham Blue Room next week

NEAR-KIDNAPING. Lotus' Buddy Shaner was very nearly kidnaped by a Miami resort during his recent vacation. But the lure of Miami wasn't as strong as the call of Lotus, meaning a wire from Bill Strickland beginning, "What's the big idea?"

TOPFLIGHT DIVERSION. Lounge Riviera. The music of Pete Macias' orchestra always has that blazing lift. Also, our fran' Pete, has the darnedest collection of Confucius jokes around town.

Pall Mall Room. The Saturday fashion luncheon is a style parade and a floor show rolled up into one, thanks to the comedy flair of Ethel Fistere, head Arthur Murrayette. Sleek music by Bert Bernath's orchestra.

Mayfair. The very mischief is raised by Maria, Joann and Joy in their Mexican numbers. They pop up with maracas, castanets, gourds, tambourines and even, a help us, a little drum. Carambal

Cafe Caprice. Eddie Mayhoff's impression of a tea room hostess has the customers squealing with mirth these evenings. But it doesn't apply to Emily Russ, Caprice's own hostess and one of the prettiest tricks in town.

Del Rio. The contrasted music of dark-eyed Maxine Patrice and blonde Lyda Ehrenberg. Maxine's violin touch and Lyda's brilliant accordioning will both "send" you.

Troika. All of that marvelous music that Sasha Lukas will violin at your request. The other eve we heard him play "Solveig's Song," "Anitra's Dance," "Dance Macabre" and "Valse Triste." The customers were enchanted.

PLATTER MAKING. Glen Hardman, star organist of the Neptune Room, has made scores of records. His fastest job, he says, was when he completed eight records in 3¼ hours. Often it is necessary to work an hour and a half on a single number before it sounds just right on the whirling platter.

McCUNE CLUB. Modest Maestro Bill McCune, of Shar-Zad, is both startled and pleased about that new "Bill McCune Fan Club." It has 25 members already and is growing every day. Bill's great popularity with the Georgetown-Trinity-Visitation contingent is partly because most of these youngsters are New Yorkers and remember him from the Plaza.

ANTRUM TROUBLE. Manager Russell A. Conn, of the Ambassador, is bothered currently with antrum trouble (it's a high-class sinus difficulty), but refuses to let it get him down and is planning a trip to New York.

ROBIN HOOD TEAM. Dean Carroll, charming young light opera singer, has teamed up with organist Tommy Johnson in the new Robin Hood. Dean can warble Gilbert and Sullivan's best numbers as well as "All the Things You Are."

THAT MEANS ANOTHER CUT IN MY WAGES
BUT IT'S MIGHTY GOOD NEWS FOR YOU . .
Mr. and Mrs. Washington
Most anyone else taking a cut in wages would feel anything but happy . . . but not me. No sir! My loss is your gain, and I'm never happier than when I can do more work for you at less pay.
I expect to be a very busy fellow this year because I'm going to have a lot of extra work to do in factories, stores, theaters and offices. The folks at home are going to give me a lot of extra chores to do, too.
With the savings you get as the result of my cut in wages, you can use me for many added duties, because the more I do for you, the lower my hourly rate of pay.

Civil Service Board Scores FBI Chief

Misrepresentation, Dictatorial Acts, Unfair Play Charged

Accused of Misrepresentation

At present, Congressional appropriations for the FBI provide for exemption of its personnel from the civil service with the exception of the technical fingerprint force in the identification division.

The commission accused Hoover of failing to play fair, indulging in misrepresentations, refusing to cooperate in a democratic system of personnel selection, and wishing to operate his own employ selection procedure in a dictatorial fashion.

In testimony January 5 before the House Appropriations Committee Hoover said the commission had certified persons for the bureau's fingerprint classification section who were shown by subsequent investigation to have had criminal records, mental ailments, "radical tendencies" and disqualifying physical defects.

"Cases of that kind should not have been certified. They should have been investigated and examined by the Civil Service Commission before they were sent to us for appointment," Hoover told the committee.

The commission said the reason the applicants were not investigated first by the commission was that Hoover has insisted that, prior investigations or no, the FBI was obliged to make its own investigations by its own men.

Complaint Called Unfair

In conformity with written assurance of Hoover, which the commission quoted, that he would conduct his own investigations of employes certified, the commission discontinued character inquiries in those cases, to avoid unnecessary duplication, the statement said.

The commission said Hoover's complaint was "an unfair and unwarranted observation."

Commenting on testimony by Hoover that Communists had been certified to him, the commission said it had no sympathy with persons who would advocate the overthrow of the overnment, but it refused "to place any individual or group of individuals in this category until it has evidence which would justify its action."

"In days such as these," the commission added, "it is very easy for situations to develop whereby individuals are 'labeled' without any justification for the label."

Claims Records Closed

It said it would disqualify any applicant for a Federal job if he advocated overthrow of the constitutional form of Government, but it would demand facts before it would take such action.

Hoover, however, the statement said, made it difficult to obtain these facts because he refused to permit the commission to inspect FBI records and supplied only the conclusions of FBI investigators.

"In other words," the statement read, "if Mr. Hoover were in sympathy with the Federal merit system as it has been established by Congress, and if he were willing to work with the agency charged with its administration, he would find, just as the heads of other law-enforcement agencies have found, that there would be no difficulty at all in obtaining persons of the highest character.

"In this connection, it is interesting to note that Mr. Hoover's bureau is unwilling to cooperate with the . . . commission in its effort to keep out of other Government agencies persons of poor character. The bureau has recently, in violation of a rule of the President of the United States, refused to open up personnel files of its former employes to investigators of the Civil Service Commission who were in the process of conducting character investigations to determine whether or not those employes should be certified to other agencies."

Csaky and Countess Engaged to Wed

Budapest, Feb. 8 (AP).—The engagement of Hungary's foreign minister, Count Istvan Csaky and Countess Maria Chorinsky, famous 28-year-old beauty, was disclosed today by friends.

A diplomatic mystery—why the 45-year-old foreign secretary frequently visited Germany on trips that were interpreted as visits to German leaders—was cleared up when it was learned he had been courting the countess at her family's castle near Graz, in former Austria.

Robertson Will Filed

Rockville, Md.—The eight children of Nelson Hezekiah Robertson, retired farmer, who died near Rockville last week at 90, will share his estate, according to his will, admitted to probate in Rockville. The instrument, executed January 12, 1933, directs his son, Clifford H. Robertson, as executor, to convert the entire estate into cash and divide the proceeds equally among the children.

"behind-the-scenes strategist" in a movement to "cleanse the congress of Communist influence."

Plavner said that a bloc of delegates would introduce twh resolutions "at the earliest possible moment," presumably tonight. One calls for "condemnation and expulsion" of the Young Communist League and several other youth groups that have been labeled "Communist fronts" by the Dies Committee. The second cals for condemnation of Russia's invasion of Finland.

The young New Yorker, who claims to have been one of the congress' founders, issued a release yesterday, quoting a pamphlet he wrote last summer. The pamphlet was sponsored by Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion; Hober L. Chaillaux, director of the national Americanism committee of the American Legion; David Hinshaw, a director of the Roosevelt Memorial Association; Victor F. Ridder, publisher of the Journal of Commerce, and John M. Shiff, president of the Henry Street Settlement in New York.

The release charged that the Youth Congress "is unduly influenced the Communists, and seeks to lead American youth into unconscious alliance with the Communists United Front."

A "Holding Company"

Joseph Cadden, executive secretary of the Youth Congress, last night denied that Plavner was a "founder" of the Congress. He said that the policy of the Congress is determined at the annual July meeting and that no resolutions can be adopted at the present sessions.

Cadden stated that the Congress is merely a "holding company" for 513 organizations, with a total membership of $4,697,915. Of these, he said, 63 are national groups. "The Young Communist League," he said, "is but one of these 63 groups."

Repercussions of the Monday night White House meeting were heard in the House yesterday in an exchange between Representative Keefe (Republican), of Wisconsin, and Representative Pierce (Democrat), of Oregon.

Keefe, stating that 16 Representatives who attended the meeting had voted against continuation of the Dies Committee, said he regretted "that the newspapers carried the story that the First Lady of the Land defends the rights of Communists in the American Youth Congress."

Attacks Called Unfair

Pierce attacked Keefe for his "criticism" of Mrs. Roosevelt and said that the leaders of the congress "wisely sought counsel" on the "expediency of expelling or retaining . . . one affiliated group of young Communists." He called the attacks "unfair" and attributed them to Republican partisanship.

The Saturday parade to the White House lawn will see a Washington contingent bringing up the rear, the Washington Youth Council announced. Plans were being completed for a session on suffrage for the District.

Sound wagons will blare out songs as the paraders truck out their stunts—at least a dozen for each of the three slogans: Jobs, Peace, Civil Liberties. Five Chicago girls will push baby carriages up the avenue with placards saying, "No War Babies." A "Joan" will be mounted on a white steed, heading the parade with the slogan: "In 1940 Joan of Arc Crusades for Jobs, Peace and Civil Liberties."

They will conclude by serenading the President with:

"We've been getting nothing else but love, Franklin.

Va. Sub-Committee To Study Revision Of Auto Safety Laws

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—The House roads committee referred today the Scott-Fitzpatrick bills designed to bring the motor vehicle safety laws up to date to a five-member subcommittee composed of Delegates Leon Bazile, R. F. Baldwin, jr., Tate B. Sterrett, Thomas B. Stanley and C. M. Waldrop.

Chairman I. N. Coleman, of Dinwiddie, during discussion of the proposed revisions, expressed dissatisfaction with the present operation of motor vehicle inspection stations, which he asserted had the motorist in their complete control.

"They can charge you what they please and you can't do a thing about it," Coleman declared.

Col. M. S. Battle, director of the division of motor vehicles, pointed out there were about 1,200 inspection stations and that the division was doing the best job it could under the circumstances.

Rail Official Dies

Bluefield, W. Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—W. O. Tracy, general western superintendent of the Norfolk & Western Railway since 1936, died today at his home after an illness of a year. He was 54.

Aid for Taxpayers

Rockville.—J. Millard Tawes, comptroller of the State treasury, has announced that a representative of his office will be at the courthouse in Rockville from February 23 through 29, to assist taxpayers in making out their State income returns. Returns must be in by not later than March 15.

religion in the life of the individual and the nation and emphasizes the necessity of respect for the convictions of other people."

Although the United States is looked on as a "young nation," said President Roosevelt, it is "fully grown up" in the "spirit of social consciousness, which is of the very essence of the scout ideal."

In conclusion he said, "for the years to come I wish you joy and happiness and deepening satisfaction up to the best traditions of scouting."

Special Church Services

Special church services, troop inspections and window-dressing competitions will feature the Washington celebration of Boy Scout Week.

The first displays representing scout activities or symbolizing scout citizenship appeared yesterday in downtown department store window. Prizes for the best displays have been offered by the Junior Board of Commerce and in the name of Capt. Chester Wells, president of the National Capital Area Council and Dr. Camp Stanley, District scout commissioner.

Dudley Hadesty, War Veteran, KiKlls Self by Gas

Dudley Randolph Hardesty, 45, World War veterand and former attendant at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, was found dead of gas last night at his home, 203 Valley street, Capitol Heights, Md. Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Hardesty's body was found in the kitchen by his wife, Mrs. Elsie Elizabeth Hardesty, when she returned fro mwork in Washington. Gas jets on a cooking stove were open and the windows and doors of the room were stuffed with rags.

U. S. and Carolina Wrangle for Pelley

request and a capias for Pelley's arrest. The Silver Shirt leader is accused of parole violation.

But Assistant United States Attorney Karl Kindleberger ruled yesterday that he still had insufficient evidence on which to issue a warrant and he refused to order Pelley's arrest until further information comes from North Carolina.

Pelley, whose gray tie and gray spats are rapidly becoming as much of a trade mark as his small white moustache and goatee, assured the committee yesterday that if it "goes ahead and licks the subversive elements in this Nation, my work is done."

Upholds Vigilantes

In a cloud of cigar smoke, the witness testified that he saw nothing un-American in vigilante action; that he believed "100 per cent" in disfranchisement of Jews, but that for seven years he had been attempting to "control" elements agaitating for pogroms in the United States.

"If the Silver Shirts had achieved their aim, would you have been the man in charge of the Government?" queried Representative Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts.

"Probably," responded Pelley.

"Would you have put into effect Hitler's anti-Jewish policies?"

Queried on Writings

"I probably would, sir," was the reply.

Starnes and others questioned Pelley at length about various quotations from his publications, which include such titles as "Dupes of Judah," "What Every Congressman Should Know," and "Indians Aren't Red."

From another of Pelley's works, "The Door to Revelation," Starnes quoted a passage stating that persons in Oklahoma had promised Pelley aid if he made the Silver Legion a political power. The individuals concerned remained unidentified.

"With My Blessing"

"Do you say the Silver Shirts will fold up if the committee continues its work?" demanded Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey.

"Yes, sir, and with my blessing," replied Pelley.

"If the Silver Shirt Legion does fold up, it won't be the first organization that has folded since the committee began its work," interjected Starnes. "The witness has bitterly condemned this committee; so have some of its members; and the chair is going to ask the witness and members of the committee to quit making statements for or against the committee."

Pelley, who said that he has written on "esoteric and metaphysical" subjects, drew a distinction yesterday between "force" and "violence." After Starnes had read a paragraph from one of Pelley's works about the "forcible removal of Jews from public office," the witness retorted that "force and violence are two different things—and I would not mean violence."

Metaphysical Query

At another point, Starnes asked Pelley why a Silver Shirt membership blank demanded the hour and minute of the applicant's birth.

The information was desired for "metaphysical" reasons, explained Pelley.

The witness told the committee that there has been no instance of Silver Shirt violence against "any individual Jew in the United States" during the last seven years "that has my sanction."

Mae West and W. C. Fields In a Western Field Day

'My Little Chickadee' Is a Keith Riot; 'West Wall' Details a Theater for War; Brief Flashes of the Local Scene

By Richard L. Coe.
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

THE GREATEST MAN IN THE WORLD has found him a consort. Pure as the drifted snow she is and twice as pretty. Her name is Flower Belle Lee and as Mae West plays her in RKO-Keith's "My Little Chickadee," Flower Belle is a fitting spouse, although such in name only, to that Defender of Chivalry, W. C. Fields.

It is our happy duty to report that what had seemed to be a magnificent idea has come off even more magnificently in reality. The master stroke of combining the inimitable arts of these two portrayers of charlatanry gave way to rumors that all was not well in the collaboration, reverberations that so slick an idea was hoisted by its own petard. But no; whatever the personal feelings of the two stars, who also collaborated on the screen-play, the result is a lusty comedy of high order, a film that makes you chuckle with joy.

Chuckle with joy that is, if you like the humor that is politely described as "earthy." Prudes will find much to shock them in "My Little Chickadee" and, we're afraid many a "Flower Belle" will wilt under the verbal barrage, but the ear which relishes a well-turned, meaty equivoque will find the lines fascinating exercise.

In the "Last Gasp Saloon" of Greasewood in the 1880s centers much of the town's life. The frontier folk are just as tough as they are in any self-respecting "western" and their habits with cards and firewater are much the same. But Greasewood has its "respectable" side as well.

Toward this metropolis is headed Flower Belle Lee, forced out of her uncle's home in a nearby settlement because she knew too much about a masked bandit who had carried her off for an evening. When the judge warned her that she was beginning to show contempt for his court, Flower Belle snorted a denial: "No, judge, I'm trying to conceal it." So Flower Belle (we love that name!) was whisked out of town on the next train by a female vigilante committee. One of the females goes along too, to be sure that she will contaminate no town until she is "married and respectable."

Cuthbert J. Twillie has gentlemanly instincts if a ribald way of showing them. Hearing of our heroine's unhappy plight, that of a female "Man Without a Country" fated to ride trains until she is married and respectable, Cuthbert gallantly offers to marry the blonde charmer. Yes, W. C. Fields is Cuthbert.

How to get married on a moving train? Pick the most saintly looking man around, palm him off as a preacher and have him pronounce the fateful words while the train whistle is a-whistling. Easy. And also hilarious when that benign fellow turns out to be card-playing, whisky-drinking Donald Meek, who begins the solemn ceremony with the words, "I suppose we are all familiar with the rules of the game?"

The happy honeymooners arrive at their hotel in fine style. There is slight stall while a dignified goat ambles by. Remarks Fields: "Bock beer, I presume."

But we won't spoil your fun by telling you any more. Suffice it to say, that Mae among other things conducts a class in "book learnin'" in which she shows a deal of discipline to her pupils. "Two and two is four," she explains. "And five'll get you ten if you know how to work it." "Everybody wants to protect me," she muses," but I don't know what from."

Miss West definitely has the better of the two leading roles, but Fields is not far behind her. While she rolls her hips and spouts her proverbs, he is more occupied with his own specialty of "gags." He reminisces at the long bar. He takes a bath with his gloves on. He crawls into bed in the dark and observes to his bed-partner that this is an odd time for her to be wearing a fur coat. It really isn't, for his couch-fellow is someone else we have mentioned earlier in this review. You guess.

The cast is fine, with Donald Meek, Margaret Hamilton, Dick Foran and Joseph Calleia handling the other leads acceptably. And if you thought Universal's other surprise "western," "Destry Rides Again," that costarred Marlene Dietrich and James Stewart was something, wait till you hear Mae ask Fields, when he shows her his card reading "Cuthbert J. Twillie—Novelties and Notions," 'What kind of notions have you got?"

Also on the Keith screen is an interesting analysis of the European battlefronts, "West Wall," illustrated with news shots, maps and comment by Maj. George F. Elliot.

Louella O. Parsons' Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 8 (INS).—everything good is happening to Ida Lupino since she went brunette. Yesterday she received the approval of English royalty for her work in "The Light That Failed" and that, to a British girl, is the Alpha and Omega of all things. She was also given the femme lead in Joseph Conrad's "Victory"—but let me tell you how she earned the praise of the King and Queen.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Ida's father, Stanley Lupino, well-known English producer and actor, was invited to take his London revue to Buckingham Palace to present it to King George and Queen Elizabeth. After their majesties looked at it, they expressed approval of the manner in which he appealed to the morale of the British soldiers. They inquired about his daughter. "Please tell her," said the gracious Queen, "that His Majesty and I saw her in 'The Light That Failed' and were delighted with her performance." You couldn't trade that compliment with Ida for a million dollars.

Joe Mankiewicz is hieing himself to New York to talk to Katharine Hepburn about "The Philadelphia Story," although the picture isn't scheduled for shooting until June. The main thing Joe wants to huddle with La Hepburn about is building up the part of the boy so it will be important enough for Bob Taylor. Harry Brandt, the exhibitor who labeled her "poison" at the box office, may be suspicious of Kathie's luck at the box office—but Joe certainly is not. Talked with him on the telephone and he thinks Hepburn will be as fascinating in her comeback as she was when she first started. The fans have certainly flocked to see her on the stage.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Elaine Barrie Barrymore goes into Jawn's show in New York on Thursday; Bee Amidon, socialite whose name was linked with Errol Flynn's by New York columnists, is in Reno getting a divorce. She'll pay Hollywood a visit when she's free; Sir Victor Sassoon sent orchids to Edith Hoffenstein in San Francisco and were the other gals jealous? You'd be surprised if you knew who Orson Welles' heart beat is.

Bette Davis, living on the Warner lot until her new home in the valley is finished. She has bought herself a new car and looks wonderfully well these days; Ginger Rogers' maw, known in Hollywood as Lela, stepping out at the Grace Hayes lodge with Joseph McGries, from Chicago; Joan Bennett's trick pillbox hat with a crown of studded jewels interested the Hollywood Brown Derby diners; Mary Livingston is throwing a birthday party February fourteenth for Jack Benny at the Victor Hugo. He was born on Valentine's Day; E. H. Griffith slipped and sprained his ankle at the Paramount Studio.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 8.

The second opening of "Meet the People" in the Hollywood Playhouse proves show is terrific whether it plays a large house or a small one. Two new highlights are a rib-tickling curtain designed by Milt Gross and a new gal who's going to end up, if she's not careful, with a big fat contract. Nineteen-year-old Nanette Fabares taps the width of the stage in nothing flat—sings, does pantomime and looks like Hepburn, with an Eddie Arnold sense of humor, and the vitality of Bette Davis. Nanette has toured in vaudeville. At 9, taught tap dancing. Had a bit in "Elizabeth and Essex." Virginia O'Brien still holds top honors. Bernice Parks' backstage tantrums aren't helping her performance any, but she's still good. Yes, it's a swell show.

HOPPER

People often wonder where song writers get their inspiration. Well, Gus Kahn, who's an old sentimentalist anyway, had a couple of lovebirds, and discovered to his grief one morning that one had died during the night. And, the legend goes, that means the passing of the other one. Gus felt so sad about it that he put it down on paper, and called it "Blue Love Birds" and Bronislaw Koper set it to music. Then he played it for Bill Maguire, who had just finished "Lillian Russell." Said Bill: "Oh, it's perfect for our picture." But of course he couldn't have it, because Gus writes songs on Metro time. Now, Zanuck has made a deal and it will be sung by Alice Faye . . . Which, for no reason at all, reminds me of an announcement I heard the other night on the Hit Parade; "now No. 10—the popular song 'This Changing World.'" And I wondered if Mr. Chamberlain of No. 10 Downing street was listening.

John Monks, jr., and Fred Finkelhoffe, who are writing the Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland picture "Strike Up the Band," were shown a list of ranking Hollywood writers, with their names seventh. "What?" Monks shouted. "That's awful." "Yes? Well, look at No. 8." They did—it was George Bernard Shaw.

Montagu Love says for one not born to the purple, he's worn more of that color trimmed with ermine than almost anyone on the screen. He's played a king 12 times, a prince 8, demoted to a duke 5, and only a dictator 3. And has done a caricature of himself in each role and costume. Little Linda Darnell is so sure her manicurist, Kay Thompson, has talent, that she offered to pay for a test herself. But now Walter Lang is doing it, and if it's a success, she'll be the second manicurist to make good on the Fox lot.

New York, Feb. 8.

Anne Kaufman, daughter of Beatrice and George S. Kaufman, will make her theatrical debut shortly in a performance to be given by the pupils of the Dalton School . . . The play will be "You Can't Take It With You," the Pulitzer Prize winner written by Kaufman and Hart . . . Anne knows almost every line of the play and auditioned for three of the leading parts . . . But she will play a male role—that of Donald, the Negro butler.

Lee Ya Ching, the Chinese movie star and aviatrix, will make a good-will flight over the Andes to South America as an envoy of the American Bureau for Medical Aid to China. She'll do it to help advertise the Chinese New Year's Ball at the Waldorf February 23. The plane and the gas have been contributed anonymously. After the flight the plane will be returned to China, to be used as an ambulance plane . . . Greta Garbo and Gaylord Hauser, who left for the South on Monday, traveled by different routes. Garbo is headed for Texas . . . Orson Welles is here to see physicians and have his allergies tested. The bearded actor-producer-director-writer fears that he may be allergic to hair.

Donald Nelson, vice president of Sears-Roebuck, was invited by the Japanese government this week to visit their country and spend a month there . . . "You will have a pleasant time," the emissary promised, "and we can assure you that you will see anybody you want to see—except the Mikado" . . . "I won't go," Nelson informed, "but suppose I wanted to see the Mikado?" "You couldn't," was the reply, "because the Mikado sees nobody unless the Mikado wants to see somebody."

Vera Milton, who was Broadway's most famous chorus girl six years ago, will return to Broadway next week. She'll work in the cloakroom at Leon and Eddie . . . Charles Friedman, who directed the original "Pins and Needles," will leave for Hollywood to work for MGM . . . Judith Allen, the screen actress who once was Mrs. Jack Doyle, has forsaken show business and now is selling insurance in Hollywood . . . Wells Lewis, son of Sinclair Lewis, is writing his second book—a novel about a seventeenth century rake. If the book ever is dramatized for Broadway, his father would like to play the leading role.

Gertrude Lawrence this week received the first acknowledgement from the soldiers who received the sweaters and socks sent by her committee . . . Miss Lawrence organized this committee of famous actresses who agreed to devote their spare time to knitting items for the British and French troops . . . "Don't send us the sweaters and socks," was the message, "Just send the wool."

Catherine McNelis, publisher of the defunct Tower magazine, paid some of the back salaries due her employees just before she left for jail to start serving her sentence . . . William Dudley Pelley, head of the Silver Shirts, kept his promise to the Department of Justice when he surrendered Tuesday. On January 15 his promise to surrender within 30 days was reported in this column . . . Queen Elizabeth's new ranking among the world's best-dressed women should be credited to her husband. King George selected the designs and told Norman Hartnell, who made the gowns, just what kind he preferred . . . Prince Bertil of Sweden has made all his night club reservations in New York under the name of "Eric Hall."

lotte Lancaster, Mrs. Goldie McKenzie and Mrs. Eula Mae Hammond.

The Ladies of Charity parish group will hold its card party in St. Paul's Hall, Fifteenth and V streets northwest, on St. Valentine's Day, according to an announcement by Mrs. James H. Fritz.

Although St. Valentine's Day is the "theme day" in the blood bank drive and more benefit parties probably will be held on that date than any other, several already have been conducted and scores more are scheduled for the latter half of February and even well into March.

Plenty of valentine-shaped party tickets are still on hand at The Post. Organizations or individuals desiring to give benefits, the entire proceeds from sale of tickets to go to the Children's Hospital blood and serum bank fund, may obtain a supply by calling at The Post or writing to the Valentine Party Editor. Station WJSV and the American Contract Bridge League are cooperating with The Post in the "Have a Heart" campaign.

Receipts yesterday included a $15 contribution raised by members of Junior Mizrachi Washington Chapter. The group sent the gift in lieu of sponsoring a party.

However, two members of the chapter announced plans for card parties in their homes. They are Mrs. Pauline M. Gross and Mrs. Sylvia Goodman and the dates are February 13 and 14, respectively.

As in the case of the Junior Mizrachi, the local chapter of the National Council of Jewish Juniors felt that there was not sufficient time to arrange for a large scale card party and voted an outright donation of $10 instead.

Broken Stamp Releases Irk Philatelists

Rockville, Md., Scoop Over Boston a Boner, Dr. Edmonds Admits

Postoffice Department trouble shooters had a new stamp misunderstanding to lick yesterday—this in connection with the current demand from ethical philatelists that something be done about unethical philatelists who break stamp release dates.

It seems that Boston, although scooped by Rockville, Md., and half a dozen other cities on the Ralph Waldo Emerson stamp which Boston was to issue exclusively Monday, held its first day sale just the same, and as if nothing had happened. The old Boston poise, as it were.

But one purchaser of the Emerson, on the first day, stuck it on a letter and tried to mail it at a postoffice in another Massachusetts town. The postmaster declined, according to reports, on the ground it only could go through the Boston office that day.

"It should not have been refused," said postal authorities.

How Rockville scooped Boston was explained yesterday by the postmaster, Dr. George L. Edmonds.

"Let's discuss postoffice murals," he said.

"It was a boner on my part," he added.

He said he was unaware that the package of stamps was for special release in another place; he just issued a few, "but it won't happen that way again."

The Mark Twain 10-cent stamp, with Hannibal, Mo., as the first-day city, has caused resurrection of the Civil War and Southern reconstruction and Representative Joseph B. Shannon (Democrat), of Missouri, did the talking. It appears that Representative William J. Miller (Republican), of Connecticut, requested that Connecticut share in the first day sales, since Twain had lived in that State, too.

Shannon said that Connecticut could sell all the first day stamps. "The Missouri boys who enlisted with him (Mark Twain) in the Confederate Army could overlook his becoming a deserter. They could overlook his becoming a Republican . . .

"But it was too much to ask that they forget or forgive that Mark Twain, Missouri-born son of a Virginia father and a Kentucky mother, consorted with those who laid the heavy and brutal hand of the oppressor upon the Southern people in the days of reconstruction," said Shannon.

Hannibal, however, will sell the first stamps, on February 13. Postmaster General Farley will speak there in eulogy of Twain's literary career, avoiding Twain's military life, it was said. Last night Shannon told The Post that he, personally, would say no more.

Oyster Inspection Bill Is Opposed By 2-State Group

By the Associated Press

More than a score of Maryland and Virginia oystermen, oyster packers and inspectors opposed before the House Merchant Marine Committee yesterday mandatory Federal inspection of oysters.

The witnesses contended that no food product was more adequately regulated now than oysters and any additional inspection would merely impose additional burdens.

The committee was studying a bill (H. R. 6130) to establish mandatory inspection and voluntary grading of all fishery products in interstate commerce.

E. H. Cooley, representing the Massachusetts Fisheries Association and proponent of the legislation, has announced his willingness to accept an amendment to the bill to make it apply only to frozen fish products.

Rollers Ahead For Hollywood In Latest Cycle

Much to its own digust, Hollywood today seems to be heading for a major cycle of sea pictures.

From the producers right down to the day laborers, everybody in the business hates sea pictures because of the grief. To begin with, there's the business of chartering and refitting a ship or two. Then a deep-sea location, with half the company seasick and the other half cussing the fog, heavy weather or lack of it.

So what? Sea pictures make money so they get made.

Latest to go before the cameras is the Dorothy Lamour-Robert Preston opus, "Typhoon," for which Paramount chartered the 57-foot schooner Gloria. A two-week location in what is supposed to be the East Indies will be spent off Catalina.

Errol Flynn will be starred in Sabatini's "The Sea Hawk" for Warners', and after that is scheduled to go into "Captain Horatio Hornblower," tale of Nelson's fleet.

Jon Hall will be starred in "South of Pago Pago" for Edward Small. Monogram is scripting "Sons of the Navy." The Hal Roach Studio is now preparing "Captain Caution."

A little later on, Paramount will do "Victory," the Joseph Conrad story; M.-G.-M. will do Jules Verne's "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," Small will make Richard Henry Dana's "Two Years Before the Mast," and James Cagney may star in "John Paul Jones."

A Will But No Way

By a majority of 3 votes the House on Wednesday defeated a motion to eliminate from current appropriations any funds for the salary of the American Ambassador at Moscow. A switch by two members would have opened the way to breaking off diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia by legislative fiat.

The emotions which led over 100 Congressmen to vote for this end are fully understandable. The overwhelming majority of Americans has been outraged by Russia's wanton attack on Finland, a nation which is held in the very highest regard in this country. But the House effort for severance of diplomatic relations, continued yesterday, was nonetheless symptomatic of confused thinking.

It is extremely doubtful if the Finns would benefit in the least from any such gesture by the United States. If cheers for them and boos for the Reds had any bearing on the struggle, the Finns would today be in Moscow—perhaps even in Vladivostok. Unfortunately, what the beleaguered Scandinavian power needs is not gestures but practical material help in the form of planes, antiaircraft guns and other military supplies. Such assistance is precisely that which Congress has shown no disposition to vouchsafe.

The House minority was demonstrating its dislike of Russia and its affection for Finland by letting off steam. An outwardly more constructive action was that taken by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in reporting out the Export-Import Bank bill under which Finland would be vouchsafed additional credits not in excess of $20,000,000 with which to purchase nonmilitary supplies.

But this action, too, belongs in the category of a well-meaning gesture of minor value to the hard-pressed Finns. So small is their need of nonmilitary supplies that up to now they have used only a small part of the original $10,000,000 credit placed at their disposal.

The large House vote to end diplomatic relations with Russia compares with the almost unanimous Senate action yesterday, giving moral support to any private bond issues Finland may decide to float in the United States. Both represent an exceedingly strong national sentiment which, because of timid and uncertain leadership, is not being converted into practical aid for Finland.

Hand In Hand

From the viewpoint of professional politicians, one of the chief advantages of the spoils system lies in the opportunities which it affords them to build up party machines with the aid of political appointees.

Passage of the Hatch Act, which is designed to protect Federal employes outside the civil service from political exploitation, has, therefore, removed one of the major obstacles to bringing these exempt groups under civil service rules and regulations. For that reason it is believed that the chances for favorable House action upon the Ramspeck bill "blanketing into" the civil service between 250,000 and 300,000 Federal employes have been greatly improved.

The measure which is now under consideration by the House is indorsed by the National Civil Service League and by Government employe unions. The chief opposition comes from Republican Congressmen and Senators who are naturally averse to a proposal that would extend the protection of the civil service to a huge army of New Deal political appointees. However, as Samuel H. Ordway, jr., former Civil Service Commissioner and present head of the National Civil Service Reform League, well says: "If we should wait until the Republicans have displaced the Democratic hacks and replaced them with their own the Democrats will oppose civil service classification of the positions just as strongly as the Republicans do now."

It is a matter of record that the civil service has expanded mainly through a "blanketing in" process like that provided for under the Ramspeck bill. Despite obvious objections to this practice, it appears to be the only feasible way of overcoming resistance to an extension of the merit system of appointment to exempt groups. To be sure, the first result is to bring into the civil service large numbers of employes who would not have been able to qualify for appointment in a competitive test. However, the Ramspeck bill provides for noncompetitive examination of employes as a preliminary to acquisition of civil service status with elimination of those who fail to pass within six months. Thus the markedly unfit will be weeded out and a foundation laid for a comprehensive and genuine merit system of appointment.

Considerable time will, of course, be required to eliminate the lingering vestiges of the spoils system upon which the extended civil service is based. But with the Hatch Act in force the temptation to revert to the system of political appointments will be slight. Once freed from the thralldom of the spoils system, most members of Congress would probably resist a return to a system which forces them to spend time and energy listening to jobseekers and risking the loss of many votes for every one captured by a political appointment.

Inventories

The outbreak of the European war last fall led to a rapid expansion of buying by industrial consumers for the dual purpose of building up depleted inventories and anticipating expected price increases. At that time warnings were frequently heard concerning the danger of an excessive accumulation of stocks which might lead to another sharp business recession comparable to that of 1937-38. This week the National Industrial Conference Board released a report on manufacturers' inventories which shows that such warnings were not without justification. Returns from about 500 representative companies reveal a substantial rise in the value of inventories during the last three months of 1939. The end-of-December inventory index of the Conference Board rose to 124—which is 24 per cent above the average of the base year 1936 and 13 per cent above the level of last August.

However, a new index of shipments based on returns from the companies supplying the inventory data show that the value of goods shipped out has also been expanding rapidly. Last December the shipments index was 47 per cent above the April low and 28 per cent higher than in August.

Judged solely by this expansion of shipments and the large amounts of unfilled orders said to be on manufacturers' books at the end of the year, the inventory situation appears to be fairly satisfactory. There was, however, a decline in new orders during the last three months of 1939 which has introduced a distinctly disquieting element into the inventory picture. Moreover, the advent of 1940 has brought with it unmistakable signs of a slackening of business activity, reflected in a decline of the Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production from a December all-time high figure of 128 to an estimated 120 for January.

While these unfavorable developments make the rise in inventories seem more serious than it otherwise would, the situation is by no means comparable with the conditions which prevailed when the 1937-38 recession began. The buying boom preceding that recession raised the inventory index of the Conference Board to 145 in October, 1937—ten months after the volume of new orders had begun to decline. Of course, there is no way of knowing when the peak of the current inventory rise will be reached, but it is encouraging to note that the rate of increase was less in December than in November.

The warnings of the early fall against overoptimism concerning the stimulative effect of the European war on domestic business appear to have served a constructive purpose. Although orders were placed in large amounts at that time, there has not been an excessive rise in industrial costs and prices such as preceded the sharp business relapse of 1937-38. The comparatively moderate increases in prices that have occurred make the rise in inventories seem less serious. There is reason to believe also that orders shifted to this country by neutrals as a result of the war will provide an increasing amount of new business for our export industries.

Furthermore, current declines in industrial operations are working against the trend toward inventory increases. Provided the reduction in manufacturing activity does not become too pronounced, it should serve as a salutary corrective of maladjustments that might otherwise lead to a serious recession.

The causal significance of inventory statistics is frequently exaggerated, as shown by repeated statements emanating from Government officials attributing the 1937-38 business reverse to excessive inventories. As a matter of fact, excess inventories develop when business activity declines. They do not explain or necessarily account for those declines.

If production is fairly adjusted to consumption demands, stocks in the hands of manufacturers and intermediate distributors will move into the channels of trade and ultimately be absorbed. If, for various reasons, businessmen overestimate the strength of consumptive demand, or if price distortions occur which check buying, inventories will accumulate to testify to the existence of maladjustments.

Trade Controls In 1939

The far-reaching effect of the war upon the commercial policies of neutrals as well as belligerents is strikingly revealed in a survey by Dr. Henry Chalmers, chief of the Division of Foreign Tariffs of the Department of Commerce. In the early months of 1939, Dr. Chalmers points out, various European countries modified their trade control methods in preparation for war. After the outbreak of hostilities, new systems of control over both imports and exports were speedily adopted by many neutrals and belligerents alike.

It is well known that Great Britain and France have greatly reduced or cut off entirely purchases in this country of many agricultural and other products ordinarily bought in considerable quantity. Dr. Chalmers reports, however, that the control measures instituted by the leading European neutrals appear to be mainly precautionary. Up to the end of January they had not imposed any new general license restrictions upon imports.

Most European countries are making determined efforts to expand their export trade, except in products required for home use or for purposes of war. There are two reasons for this, as Dr. Chalmers notes: First, the proceeds of export sales provide the means of paying for essential imports. Secondly, by keeping export industries active, steady employment is assured for workers.

While exports are being encouraged, insofar as emergency conditions permit, the nations at war are trying to keep imports at a minimum in order to conserve their foreign exchange resources, particularly their dollar balances. Partly for economic reasons and partly on political grounds, Great Britain and France are also administering their import control policies with a view to favoring empire countries. Indeed, Dr. Chalmers asserts that the "trade control measures and arrangements adopted since the first of September, 1939, constitute long strides toward a closer commercial integration of the various parts of the British Empire than has probably ever existed, at least since early colonial days."

Many of the emergency trade policies adopted during a war period will undoubtedly disappear with the advent of peace. But the closer, preferential trade arrangements made within the British Empire are likely to leave an enduring impress. Having attained a greater measure of self-sufficiency, the component parts of the empire may not be eager to revert to prewar conditions when peace returns.

Furthermore, the extensive and diversified system of import and export controls operating within the empire, combined with price guarantees and purchase agreements, set up new relationships that will be hard to break. The prospect may well create a feeling of anxiety in this country in view of the importance of our trade with Great Britain.

Not only in European countries but in Latin America also the war has become a disturbing influence. We have benefited in some instances from a relaxation of Latin-American import control systems designed to facilitate shipment of goods from this country no longer obtainable in Europe. For Latin America as well as for the United States, however, the war has created a feeling of uncertainty regarding the future. Planning ahead is virtually impossible when trade movements in so many countries are subject to the discretionary control of officials who must adapt their policies to constantly changing needs.

While such conditions prevail, it is obviously impractical to extend the reciprocal trade program to new fields. For the time being, our efforts will no doubt have to be devoted chiefly to modifying pacts already concluded to allow for changes growing out of the war. But, as Dr. Chalmers' survey indicates, we shall be confronted by innumerable postwar adjustment problems that will call for the services of expert negotiators.

Congress should recognize that future need and pass the trade agreements bill which the Ways and Means Committee reported out yesterday, authorizing the Department of State to continue its efforts to lower trade barriers.

The Bug Purge

From the Bloomington Pantagraph

We may grumble at the cold weather and our own discomforts because of it. We may feel pity for the poor who are not protected against the rigors of subzero temperatures.

But there are some things affected by the extreme cold for which there will be no show of pity by the ruthless humans.

These are the various kinds of bugs that kill or eat the farmer's crops in summer.

An open, or mild, winter is fine for these pests, for they get through to spring in fine physical fettle and ready for the job of destroying crops.

An extra cold spell of weather at this season may result in putting the quietus on millions of these creatures, leaving that many less for the farmers to fight next summer. Arctic temperature also helps the gardener, who will be rid of some of his innumerable enemies.

Inside As Well As Out

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There's a plan afoot out here in Georgetown that I'm mildly wild about. However, it needs a little exposure.

A band of contemporaries is seeking to keep the colonial flavor of strictly colonial-type residences, stimulate the renovation of the existing frayed facades.

I read about it in public print somewhere recently. The details escape me.

I'm heartily in favor of such a green shutter campaign. And a great deal more. I'd zone Georgetown so that the entire residential and business sectors would be restricted to colonial architecture (as it is commonly known), an eventual restoration that would provide interesting atmosphere close by the Capitol, and would be potentially profitable.

However, there's a single flaw. We're skipping a beat. Green shutters do not a colonial village make.

I mean you've got to have some atmosphere inside the structures. Maybe not periwigs and knickerbockers, but at least a sharp sniff of hot spiced rum and an inkling of pungency of authentic Smithfield ham; the warm bonhomie of the early inn.

MR. GEORGE TOWNE BABBITT.
Washington, Feb. 6.

Blind Leading Blind

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We should give emergency wartime powers to the President and end the tragic heart-breaking farce which has given the inhuman dictators the green light all along.

Many months ago, when ill-advised critics mouthed the words "hysteria," "sleeping powders" and so forth, his quick ears had caught the distant hoof beats of the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse. He gave us ample and timely warning.

Since then they have ridden their idiot steeds through seas of blood and grisly heaps of skeletons. And their ghoulish foray has just begun.

Great Britain was once at the parting of the ways and knew it not. Before World War No. 1 Lord Roberts gave her Parliament a frantic warning. Had the members of that body dropped all their party squabbles and heeded the semaphore signal, the Hohenzollern's swift-spring would not have taken place and caught England unawares. Yet as it was, Churchill anticipated orders and the fleet was ready. Today we, the vain glorious democracy of the west, stand in our turn at the parting of the ways. The epileptic paperhanger gone berserk, has with the cunning intention peculiar to his type of insanity singled out Churchill and our President as dangerous enemies, because of their very alertness to his sadistic designs.

Yet at the very moment when little Finland has sent us an anxious greeting which rightly paraphrased should read:

Ave America, morituri te salutant, a little band of overprivileged politicians from the land of Liliput are banding together.

Hopelessly myopic in their vision and with a hideous callousness to the consequences of their misdeed: their purpose is to hobble still more tightly one of the greatest humanitarians of any age. "If the blind lead the blind, shall they not both fall into the ditch?"

More On The Symphony Controversy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a Philadelphian, who has had the pleasure of hearing the Philadelphia Orchestra in Philadelphia, as well as in Washington, it is my firm conviction that Washington needs an orchestra of its own. I don't think it advisable for the Capital City of Washington to openly admit its cultural bankruptcy by permitting the National Symphony Orchestra to dissolve, allowing approximately 80 musicians to be thrown out of work, and inviting the Philadelphia Orchestra to play for us. No doubt, Mr. Stokowski has built a fine orchestra, but as everyone knows the Philadelphia Orchestra has been in existence for more than 9 years.

Neither musicians nor any one else, can live on $26 a week in Washington, especially if they have families to support, which many of them do. Therefore, they are forced to seek other employment during the time that they are not playing with the orchestra. Sometimes they are successful and other times they are not.

It seems to m that if Washington wants to have a symphony orchestra which it should be proud of, the only decent thing to do is to raise enough money from the subscribers to pay the musicians a salary which will at least partially defray these living expenses. The salary paid them at the present time hardly does that.

It seems to me that if Washington of the orchestra are being very generous in furnishing adults, as well as children at the children concerts, with symphonic music, for which they are paid such insignificant salaries. If school children are willing to contribute to the upkeep of an orchestra, certainly it must be important in the cultural life of Washington and warrants the serious consideration of the many thousands of other listeners.

Both the Philadelphia Orchestra and th Metropolitan Opera Association have had to resort to the practice of calling upon their audience and friends to render additional financial assistance.

A FRIEND OF THE SYMPHONY.
Washington, Feb. 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is it not manifestly unfair for the directors of the Washington Symphony Orchestra to assume offhand and without effort the impossibility of obtaining the money required by the demands of the musicians?

Because the methods employed to meet the situation that existed a year ago were not entirely successful it does not follow that other methods to meet a different situation would fail.

What is really revealed by this illogical attitude of the directors is their old time and rooted hostility to the union. It is not the additional money required but the mere existence of the union that is the crux of the whole difficulty. The opportunity to discredit and distroy the union seems to have been deemed too good to be lost. The real question is whether musicians have the right to organize in their own defense and for their own benefit—a right enjoyed incidentally and without question by doctors, lawyers, retail merchants and clergymen.

WILLIS J. RUTLEDGE.
Washington, Feb. 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a regular concert attendant, and as one deeply interested in the future of the National Symphony Orchestra, certain phases of the present stalemate in the symphony's relations with its musicians have come to my attention that I believe should be brought before the public to help in the settlement of the controversy.

Through the newspapers I have gathered the impression that the musicians' union has requested an increase of $10 in their base pay, thereby raising their minimum to $60. From statements by the management I gather that the union is unwilling to compromise on this issue, but orchestra members assure me that they are willing to entertain any reasonable compromise. The management has thus far refused to meet them on this issue, however.

Further, certain rumors have been making the rounds to the effect that Dr. Kindler's salary is out of proportion to the total amount raised for the upkeep of the orchestra. So far as I know the symphony management has never taken the trouble to lay these rumors at rest. If this is true, it lays an undue burden on those who subscribe to the symphony, as well as on those who play in it.

If some detailed accounting of expenditures could be made public showing beyond shadow of doubt that the symphony cannot afford to raise salaries under its present income, I am certain that the musicians, as public-spirited a body as exists in this community, would accept the fact without a murmur. But until this is substantiated by the actual figures, certainly they have basis for suspicion that the management is not extending them the cooperation to be expected in such a public enterprise.

J. PERRY.

Saw Lincoln

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As Abraham Lincoln is now of Nation-wide and intense interest, the writer had the pleasure of seeing President Lincoln on March 4, 1865. He rode out the back way of the White House with Secretary Seward. They were in a hack (top down) drawn by two fine bay horses, a colored coachman driving. Just as they entered Pennsylvania avenue at Fifteenth street one of the horses became fractious and reared up. A dismounted cavalryman caught the bridle and patted the horse on its neck, and the journey was resumed to the Capitol.

I got a good look at the President on his way to the Capitol to be sworn in for the second term. My father was employed during the Civil War as a sailmaker at the Navy Yard. He was one of the 276 men who were armed with a musket and 40 rounds of ammunition and marched out to one of the forts to defend Washington City against Gen. Jabal Early's Confederate soldiers. OCTOGENARIAN.
Washington, Jan. 31.

Sans Gene Autry

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now I understand why you are injecting the French influence in the horse thing. You evidently want to decide the thing sans Gene. Personally I believe in settling American equine controversies through a Gallup poll. L. W.
Washington, Feb. 7.

The Post Impressionist

Winter In The Sunny South

January 23.

The snow didn't begin in the gloaming but in the dawning. But it heaped things with a silence just as deep and white. There are snow men, women and children from one side of this town to the other, all decked out with various assortments of old hats, caps, pipes, etc. Mighty cute in daytime but spooky at night.

I'd really be thrilled over our one big snow if it were not for the waterworks. Oh, pshaw! I forgot that the snow has nothing to do with that for I've been tripping over an array of buckets and boilers (filled with water) in bathrooms and kitchen for fully three weeks. I almost know with my eyes shut that this bucket contains water for toothbrushing, that one for drinking, still another for the dog and the dribble in the bottom of the tub for spot washing.

No school tomorrow. Snow too deep. Hurrah for the snow. I'm off to bed (though to see me you'd think it was for a 'possum hunt—several layers of bathrobes, socks under bedroom slippers, muffler for traveling across to the bathroom).

Midnight, January 24.

Shades of Aunt Jemimah's ghost! The thermometer has truly "feel up to zero." Hale (the dog) has howled incessantly since 9 p. m. After threats, then entreaties from window and porch, I dress up like a true Eskimo and put forth to the yard. There stands Hale barking at nothing in the world but the situation. We both return (one of us very much vexed).

January 25.

Arose before the cold gray dawn. What I mean is I arose before the dawn, not before the cold. And speaking of cold, this is the worst yet. The bathroom was like ice in spite of the oil stove. Strings, hairs, dust, etc., were floating around in all the buckets. I poked into several trying to bring out at least a part of the collection, but it is amazing how illusive a hair or string can be when it is in a bucket of water. After sousing into all drinking and toothbrushing water I gave up, drank and brushed—hair, strings and all.

I may have thought it cold at home—but don't let me get started on that schoolhouse. I had better skip it. Suffice it to say that practically all the children were there, which shows that folks will go to a lot of trouble to let the other fellow nurse their children. That's about all we could do—act as nursemaids. Too cold for hands or minds to work.

In the afternoon I carried water from back porch spigot to bathroom, lugged in wood, hugged fire. Later dressed for the 'possum hunt, manned with hot water bottle and electric pad.

January 26.

Was it I who moaned over the inconvenience of dipping water from buckets and tubs? Surely not I! Would that the water would dip. The buckets are now a mass of ice. I melted half a pint for washing around eyes, found a plug of chewing gum and chewed it to save brushing teeth. Such weather. Ninety per cent at school. They would be! Arms couldn't bend for wraps. Coughs and sniffles all day. What a life. Back home. No water to lug. All spigots frozen. The snowmen scattered over town haven't lost an ounce. Icicles a foot long everywhere. I've been thinking about that song we sing at school in January—"I'm a Gay Little Eskimo." I'm off that song for life.

January 27.

B. P. D. (Back To Privy Days).

Nothing about any of the waterworks in the neighborhood working. I got in several arm loads of wood. I needed the wood for some ice I had to melt for a slight bath as I had been invited to an afternoon party. After the bath I remembered that I had forgotten to wash my face (I hadn't disturbed the face or the ice in the a. m. Thought I'd let one melting do). Ran a cloth over some crushed ice, poked around the face and thought what's the use of living. Went to the party, found everybody else in the same fix. Felt quite cheered up and decided to keep on living.

January 28. (Still B. P. D.)

Shoveled a path past the woodpile. Kept fires going, melted ice, did some slight dusting, drank only when absolutely necessary. Washed not at all. Found that by building a fire over the spigot in the front yard we could get water. Lugged for hours. (What lack of sense. I lug water into the house only to have it freeze again.) I'm looking forward to the waterworks at school tomorrow.

January 29.

They didn't work. That is, the waterworks at school. Everything connected with them was busted. Found out from a little boy who lives next to the schoolhouse that their water flowed, so one by one the teachers filed over. The heat at school was on the decline. Oh, well, I'm about acclimatized anyway. Practically perfect attendance at school was on the decline. Visited across the street this afternoon. All waterworks frozen. Folks afraid to build fires in kitchen stoves (ancient models) for fear of bursting hot water tanks. Many all over town already burst. One woman badly hurt. Some folks carrying water for several blocks. Very few houses with crescents. Everybody doesn't have such luxuries. I didn't know how to appreciate it until I reached school this a. m. The newspaper says a warm wave is on the way from Northwest to the South. That sounds batty to me—"a warm wave from the Northwest." But if she's thar let 'er come.

January 30, (B.P.D.)

Well, well, a week or more since the big snow and like "The Grapes of Wrath" the situation grows worse. What next, I wonder. Who said, "Nothing's so bad but it could be worse?" Watchman, what of the night? Or rather, what of the morrow? Shall water we borrow? Tomorrow tells another tale. But I'm wearing thin in places. Time marches on. But meanwhile, woe is me, and I don't mean maybe.

New Form Of Journalism

THESE PECULIAR times are setting a strange departure in American journalism—the emergence of the news letter, the mimeographed clip of sheets sent to special subscribers and purporting to tell "the news behind the news," to give facts not available to regular journalists and thus to throw light where no light is.

MISS THOMPSON

The model for this new type of journalism already existed in special services got out for special groups of people with particular interests. Such a service is, for instance, the Kiplinger letter, which is particularly designed for investors. There are numerous "letters" of this sort.

It is interesting to remember that the newspaper actually evolved from the reports of the great House of Fugger, bankers to the Hapsburgs at about the time that Columbus was discovering America.

This house, which financed governments, had correspondents all over the world who reported on such events as might have repercussions upon investments. The reports were not for the public, but for esoteric groups of "insiders." In the 1920's some scholars and journalists dug up the correspondence from the Austrian archives, and one was able to see the genesis of modern journalism.

Human Interest Stories of Yore

THE BANKERS' correspondent in England wrote one of the finest pieces of terse, brilliant reporting I have ever read, in an eyewitness description of the execution of Mary Queen of Scots; sometimes they departed from political and financial affairs to send "human-interest" stories of the same kind that regularly appear today in the American press during dog days—gossip and accounts of the birth of monstrosities and other sideshow news.

The new crop of news letters must be differentiated from reports of a limited and technical kind designed for special groups such as investors.

They are designed for the general public, or rather for those who reach and influence the general public.

They are read by a limited number of people, but the attempt of their publishers is to reach people who, in turn, have an influence over other people—such as editorial writers, publicists, Congressmen, lecturers, professors, writers for magazines and that part of the public that prides itself on being especially well informed.

Those who read them are encouraged to believe that they are sharing "inside information" possessed only by a few.

Some of them forbid the republication of any of this information in any form—one has been let in on a secret.

Of course, the secret is as open as the day; the object of the letters is to inform and influence opinion; the admonition really merely means "Read it and use it, but don't quote me."

Others carry no such inscription.

These "letters" are, without any question, having an important influence on molding public opinion. And because they have that influence, it is necessary to point out a few things about them.

All of them purport to be "objective," to publish "facts" and "news"—news, which somehow, by some malign influence, is "suppressed" elsewhere.

Mouthpieces of Special Groups

ALL OF THEM carry the name or names of "sponsors" or editors. But not one of them tells the truth about itself: namely, that it is the mouthpiece of a special group and that it is doing a piece of special pleading. Not one of them begins to be as objective as the American press is as a whole. Some have more expert informatiton than others, due to their closeness to one group or another in public affairs or in some government. For the careful reader, who knows what he is reading, all of them have value, because through them one can learn what is the viewpoint of the special group, doing a piece of special pleading. That is the real "news" that they contain.

Let me take four "letters" as illustrations: The Week, which is cabled every seven days from London and distributed from 20 Vesey street to special subscribers. Uncensored, which is published at 112 East Nineteenth street, New York City, The Whitehall Letter, which comes, also weekly, from London, by air mail, and The Weekly Letter, "a private publication," mailed from 515 Madison avenue.

There are dozens more: News letters put out by Germans, by Czechs, by Poles, by anti-Nazi Germans and what not; but most of these immediately reveal their source, and while claiming that their facts are true, are frankly and honestly propaganda. These others are not.

The responsible editor of The Week is called Claud Cockburn, onetime special correspondent of The London Times in Washington, an exceptionally brilliant journalist, whose weekly letter has often contained "startling revelations"—some of which have afterward turned out to be true, others of which have turned out to be religiously false.

But the important thing about The Week is that Mr. Cockburn is a Communist, and faithfully presents the Communist Party line regarding the war in England. I say he "is" a Communist—a statement for which I have no proof at the moment. He certainly "was" one; he was an international Communist Party agent. I have known him for years, and he was representing Moscow's interests in Berlin (maybe some others that I do not know) before Hitler ever came to power.

Censor Lenient With Cockburn

THE INTERESTING thing to ask about The Week is how Mr. Cockburn manages to get the British government's consent to cable to America information which American correspondents in London would not get past the censor.

Mr. Cockburn's The Week was violently antiappeasement at the time of the Czech crisis. (That was then the Communist Party line.) He invented the story of the "Cliveden Group."

Today he is defeatist, and appeasing. One can only guess about the remarkable fact of his cable privileges. Perhaps, one thinks, there is still an "appeasement" group who find Mr. Cockburn useful. If so, who are they and what is the quid pro quo that Mr. Cockburn gives for the privilege of influencing American public opinion to believe that there are continuous serious rifts in the British and French public?

Perhaps the anti-Churchill group, since Mr. Cockburn has been full of sinister implications about the Hore-Belisha affair.

The Whitehall Letter, in contrast, is pro-Churchill. It is careful in its selection of information; it has been consistent; it was antiappeasement during the Czech crisis and has remained so. It often gives correct information regarding economics and by and large takes the liberal economic line of the London Economist.

Uncensored is a venture of log-rolling journalists. The title is a complete misnomer. It suggests that this letter contains news that might not oherwise be printed. It contains very little news of any kind and none that could not be printed by the sponsors themselves in the numerous publications to which they have access.

In fact, four of them are columnists: Harry Elmer Barnes, John T. Flynn, Ernest L. Meyer and Dorothy Dunbar Bromley.

One edits a magazine—Selden Roman, another a newspaper—Alfred Bingham, and the others have never, as far as I know, had any difficulty in making themselves heard: Mr. Stuart Chase is one of them.

Uncensored is a propaganda sheet to promote the ideas of the "neutrality bloc now being formed in Congress" and of the Congress of Peace societies. It makes propaganda to discourage Army recruiting, favors the Ludlow Amendment, is against increased arms expenditures and is strongly anti-British.

The Log Rollings Is Well Done

IT CAREFULLY divorces itself from the Nazi and Communist propaganda—is, indeed, anti-Hitler—but is against anything being done against the Nazis.

It gets itself into a rather odd position by attacking interventionists and advocating intervention to make peace in Europe, if strictly confined to mediation and good advice. Thus, while denouncing Hitlerism, it follows almost exactly the line of the Communist and Nazi propaganda in this country.

Now, all this is all right. People have a right to speak. But why not say what you are? Why call yourself Uncensored when every word is censored by the editors themselves in behalf of a policy they are advocating?

The individual columnist is a different breed of cat. He (or she) is personally and solely responsible.

We have not "inside dope" but rely on what is available to all who can read, on our backgrounds as reporters, and on such personal connections as we choose openly to cultivate.

If we are wise we join no committees to advocate anything, for in these days you never can tell with whom you will find yourself, or in what boat, if you join a committee.

And our justification or ruin will depend, in the long run, upon the degree of accuracy with which we have judged events, and the results of the policies that we have supported or opposed.

Praise Vs. Slaps

HAROLD ICKES recently got out a little book about the press, in which he observed in a rather complaining way that too much of the wisdom contained in these essays was unkind in tone. That is a hot one coming from him, but the criticism was not original with the Secretary of the Interior. It is an old story, and although I try and try to write nice, somehow it comes out mean, which is a matter of great distress, because I want to be loved. My nature is very affectionate.

But, looking back, I observe that the most obdurate boosters in journalism have not been the best reporters and that very often the boost was not so much honest praise out of a sweet nature but a plug written for motives that were no less reprehensible than honest, if sometimes captious, dissent. I suppose everybody knows about old Mr. Brisbane's work as capper for his own real estate interests, and all newspapermen remember when, in going over the proofs as they came down from the composing room, they would find items slugged "must" telling about the engagement of the charming and talented daughter of someone who just happened to be a heavy advertiser.

And then, in the sport business, sometimes a certain sport page would give big play to some fighter who had all the knacks and earmarks of a confirmed bum, and after a while it would come out that the sport editor or a writer had been cut in for a piece of the tramp. Or a promoter would cut someone in for a piece of the house.

Self-Hypnotism Also Played Part

"I DON'T SAY that all praise of fighters and fights was sold that way, but everyone in the business knew that some of it was strictly merchandise and that there were individuals who wrote plugs not out of goodness of their sunny and generous hearts but because they didn't dare write otherwise. On the other hand, there were honest optimists who would get utterly silly crushes on athletes or even on individual horses and try to root them in, ignoring faults in their work or temperament which were obvious to anyone with balanced judgment.

Or, being stubbornly romantic, some individuals would persuade themselves to ignore the fact that this or that fighter was owned and operated by some bootlegger or mob, and insist on believing that the lithe, lean, dumb and handsome gladiator was going in there to put forth his best efforts when it was obvious that the poor tiger had no voice in the matter. That was innocent self-hypnotism, but, anyway, the customers were getting unreliable service, even though the entertainment value of such writing was first class.

Crowd Provided Own Thrills, Fun

AS I LOOK BACK I believe I sort of elected myself the offset. It wasn't a conscious decision. It just worked out that way. As to the grafters, I thought that most of them never did have any place in the newspaper business and were dousing up a very nice business. It wasn't on behalf of the public that I was resentful but on behalf of the business, because, after all, the public never was really the loser, even on a fake fight or an overrated show.

Some fakes were better than an earnest, monotonous drag to a close decision, and if a poor show drew too much money, then the crowd provided its own thrills and fun. The crowd makes the occasion, and sometimes a great fight is unimpressive because there aren't enough people. And I never believed that we had any right to build up reputations as restaurateur and "sportsman" for operators who were known to all of us as nothing but racketeers.

When one low hoodlum was taken for a ride and dumped over the wall of a cemetery in Brooklyn, one hero-worshipper with a column of space at his disposal wrote one of those "good-bye, old Pal" pieces that would nauseate a buzzard. By muscling into the sport racket the hoodlums were chumming up very close to our business and getting publicity on the pretext that they were picturesque when they were just dirty and low.

Mr. Ickes Sounds Somewhat Sour, Too

WELL, SINCE THEN in the cosmic line, things have been much the same, but with a difference. In this line, people get crushes, too, and tend to minimize or justify inconsistences, irregularities and injustices, and in some cases to pal around with the Bolos, who are the equivalent of the hoodlums on the sport side. When Ickes says I got censored out I like to point out that his boss, Mr. Big, censored him out, too, as he will admit if you corner him and give him the old "yah."

And when they say I sing for my supper I can show that one of their fair-haired New Deal numbers got his take in the form of a radio assignment negotiated by the Administration.

So it ain't me, altogether. The facts are a little rancid, too, and if not, how does it come that Mr. Ickes sounds so sour himself that they call him Donald Duck?

Behind The Allied Concentrations

ONE OF THE KEY mysteries of the European war is that concerning Allied military concentrations in the Near East.

According to what the Associated Press calls "authoritative French sources," France alone has assembled 275,000 troops in that area under the command of Gen. Maxime Weygand. The British admit having a force in Egypt, Palestine and elsewhere in the eastern Mediterranean of more than 200,000 men.

NOVER

Together, therefore, the Allies have close to half a million men under arms in a region remote from the Western Front.

Such a force is obviously not needed to preserve order in the Near East. The French have had their troubles in Syria. The British, during recent years, had had no easy time of it in Palestine. Yet the war, far from making more difficult the problem of maintaining order in those mandated areas has actually simplified it. Nationalist agitation, both in Syria and Palestine, has temporarily died down.

Danger of Balkan Invasion Remains

IN THE MEANTIME the situation in the Near East has changed in another important respect.

Before the war broke out, the Allies had to consider the possibility that Italy would go in on Germany's side. They had to prepare, therefore, for an attack on Egypt and the Suez Canal from the direction of Tripoli.

That danger can, for the time being, be discounted. There remains the danger of a German or Russian or combined German-Russian invasion of the Balkans. This danger may or may not be great. It cannot be ignored. And should such an invasion occur the nations that may find themselves in the path of the totalitarian steamroller would obviously need assistance. The force which the Allies have assembled in the Near East could be used for that purpose, presumably in conjunction with the Turkish army.

In a real sense Turkey holds the key to the fate of the Balkan States in the present war.

When the conflict began Turkey was still, so to speak, on the fence. She had made a tentative alliance with the Allies, but she was also on good terms with Russia. Since then the Anglo-Turkish and Franco-Turkish alliances have been made watertight, while relations between Ankara and Moscow have steadily cooled. Despite the fact that the terms of the alliances with the Allies do not require Turkey to act in the event of a Russian aggression, there is a strong likelihood that the Turks will not make use of this loophole should the Allied guarantee to Rumania have to be fulfilled.

German-Turkish Relations Deteriorate

IN THE MEANTIME, despite the efforts of Franz von Papen, Germany's Ambassador at Ankara, German-Turkish relations have steadily deteriorated. The fear which the other nations of southeastern Europe have of the Reich does not exist in Turkey. Yesterday, for instance, Turkish marines occupied the Krupp shipyards on the Golden Horn at Istanbul and German naval technicians employed there were dismissed.

But the defensive aspects of the Allied force in the Near East probably tell only half the story. The possibility that they have been assembled for the ultimate purpose of creating a new front against Germany or Russia, or both, must also be taken into account.

Both in Great Britain and France sentiment in favor of greatly increased assistance to Finland is growing. In part, this is a product of the emotional reaction to the gallant fight the Finns have been making against seemingly hopeless odds. In part, too, it arises out of the belief that the Finnish war is no isolated conflict but an integral part of the Allied struggle against Germany. For the longer Russia is forced to employ her resources in an effort against the Finns the less likelihood there is that Russia's resources could be put at the disposal of the Reich.

May Have Consequences in Near East

THUS THE TEMPS which frequently reflects the views of the French Foreign Office has been insisting for days that it is no longer possible to separate the European war from the Baltic conflict. "Any blow against the aggressor in Finland, is against the ally and helper of Hitler and directly affects him." And other French newspapers are ringing the changes on the same theme and, in view of the censorship, presumably with the consent of the government.

This same idea, once it becomes the official policy of the Allies, may have consequences in the Near East which are not difficult to imagine. Finland can be helped by the dispatch of aid directly to that country. She might also be helped if Russia were compelled to divide her forces by having to concentrate a large body of troops in the Black Sea area to ward off a possible thrust via Turkey, and the Dardanelles.

Thus, even if the Allied forces in the Near East are never used, their presence may have a bearing on the two wars which are regarded by more and more Frenchmen and Englishmen as just two fronts of the same war.

Golf 'Honor'

In this world epidemic of scrambling the regulations, busting the rules and scuttling the traditions, not even golf is being let alone. The latest proposal is to change the rule about the "honor," or the right to drive first after winning a hole. The suggestion is that it be made optional, in case a golfer sees some advantage in letting his opponent take the first wild swing.

The Professional Golf Association has been polling the pros, most of whom favor the change, but, come what may, the rule will be changed, so far as the average golfer is concerned, only over his dead body.

The rank and file of American golfers have been battling for the "honor" all their lives. The right to take the first sock at the ball may have been no advantage. It may even have brought humiliation upon them. But they have never surrendered it. And they never will.

Oscar Z. Whiffer may have known he would only get a bare 40 yards into a trap, or miss the ball completely, but if he had just managed to win a hole he was unyielding about having won the "honor." A golfer winning the honor only twice in one season has been known to boast about it for years.

"Change the rule about the 'honor'!" exclaimed Elmer Twitchell, first man in America to break 100, using the wrong club on every hole. "You might as well ask the guy nearest the cup to take the first putt!"

"What have I been struggling at the ancient game all these years for?" he thundered. "To win a hole and then let the enemy fire first! Why have I, year in and year out, staggered across country in all kinds of weather, enduring jests, sarcasms and invectives? Just to get an 11 to my opponent's 12 and then say, 'You first, my dear Edmond!' Don't be crazy!"

It was explained to Mr. Twitchell that many pros favor the change because they believe it is often to a winner's advantage to let the opponent drive first, and see how the wind affects the ball. "Neither wind, nor tide, nor snow, nor rain, nor flood shall stay the American golfers in their determination to take the honor after winning a hole!" declared Elmer.

"As a representative of the rank and file I deplore the thought of such strategy," he went on, "by letting my opponent drive first I might discern the force of the wind, the condition of the atmosphere, the roll of the fairway and the texture of the grass, but I wouldn't let the big gorilla get the honor from me if it meant giving me a line on tomorrow's weather, the next stock market movement or the right date for the end of the European war!"

January Business Below December's, Hopkins Reports

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins said yesterday that "January business fell below the high level established in December," but added that trade still was brisker than a year ago.

His estimate coincided with a Federal Reserve Board estimate last night that its index of industrial production declined from 128 in December to 120 in January, which nevertheless was the highest January figure on record.

"The January decline in operations of primary manufacturing industries was influenced," Hopkins said, "by the decrease in the flow of new business, which was below the rate of production.

"Activity was sustained in plants producing advanced manufactures —mainly producers' goods—in which lines very substantial unfilled orders had been carried over in the new year. . . . Freight traffic was up one-eighth (compared with a year ago), exports were much larger, and retail sales recorded a substantial percentage increase."

Comic 'Conspiracy'

By Ernest K. Lindley

Potent Glass-Byrd Machine

SENATOR GLASS has been fulminating—or pretending that he was—over a reported "conspiracy" among Roosevelt Democrats in Virginia, inspired by Tommy Corcoran, to keep himself and Senator Byrd off the Virginia delegation to the Democratic National Convention.

LINDLEY

A certain playfulness can be sensed behind the Senator's indignation. Certainly he is not alarmed. Virginia custom requires that the two Senators, the Governor, and the Democr tic National Committeeman from Virginia shall be delegates at large. If any armchair political strategist in Washington thought this tradition could be broken his year to the humiliation of Senators Glass and Byrd, he cannot have received much encouragement from leading Roosevelt Democrats in Virginia. In addition to custom, Senator Byrd's political machine has to be reckoned with. Its potency is illustrated by the fact that it controls the State Senate, although the Roosevelt Democrats have a slender majority in the lower house of the Legislature.

The story of the "conspiracy," to which wide publicity has been given, is rather comic. Actually it seems to have received credence chiefly because the most important piece of evidence was suppressed, or at least not published. Senator Glass had neither seen nor heard of it when he began his fulminations. This missing piece is a letter in which Martin A. Hutchinson, spokesman for Gov. Price, leader of the Roosevelt Democrats, flatly repudiated the suggestion that there was any movement to keep Senators Glass or Byrd off the Virginia delegation.

How The Rumor Originated

THIS LETTER was written on December 29, 1939, to Joseph Leib, whose earlier and sketchier correspondence with Gov. Price and Mr. Hutchinson made up the principal "evidence" of the conspiracy.

Leib is a young man, with an office address in the National Press Building, Washington, who corresponds with local political leaders. His letterhead proclaims that he founded the first Roosevelt for President Club in the United States, in 1930. With this credential and his diligence as a letter-writer, he often obtains interesting information. This he usually sells to newspapers, sometimes in articles written by himself.

In this case Leib began by writing to Gov. Price that he had heard about a movement in Virginia to keep Senator Glass from going as a delegate to the Democratic National Convention. In reply, Gov. Price referred Leib to his close friend, Mr. Hutchinson.

On December 23, Leib wrote to Hutchinson, asking about the movement to keep Senators Glass and Byrd from being chosen as delegates.

On December 27, Hutchinson replied that the Virginia political situation was too complex to write about, but saying that he would be willing to drop in for a personal talk the next time he came to Washington. Hutchinson said that as a supporter of the President he had been "somewhat annoyed at the attitude of Senators Glass and Byrd toward the Administration of President Roosevelt."

THIS MUCH of the correspondence, with a little filling, became the basis for the story of a "conspiracy" published in a weekly magazine and subsequently more widely. It was shown to Senator Glass also. Part of the filling was to the effect that Hutchinson came to Washington and conferred with Tommy Corcoran about the plan to freeze out Glass and Byrd. Actually, Hutchinson has never set eyes on Corcoran, and, since this correspondence, has not been any nearer to Washington than Fairfax, Va.

What was not published at the time was that on December 28, Leib again wrote to Hutchinson, urging him to outline the Virginia situation briefly by letter. Leib said he had to leave Washington in a few days on a trip to the Middle West.

On December 29, Hutchinson responded with a two-page letter which exploded the story Leib had originally sought to confirm. In this letter Hutchinson said:

"I know of no movement here in Virginia having for its purpose the keeping of any particular individual off of the delegation from this State to the next Democratic National Convention. There is a feeling among a large body of Democrats that an attempt should be made to send an uninstructed delegation to the next national convention. It is my thought that liberal Democrats of Virginia should work to that end, and I believe with proper organization it would be possible to send an uninstructed delegation. . . ."

Virginia Tradition Was Cited

HUTCHINSON ALSO wrote: "Personally, I think it would be unwise for President Roosevelt's friends here in Virginia to make any direct attempt to keep Senators Glass and Byrd off of the next delegation from Virginia to the national convention, since it is a tradition in Virginia that the two United States Senators go as delegates to the convention."

Mr. Hutchinson said also:

1. He doubted that Senator Byrd would seek to have the delegation instructed for him. Byrd comes up for renomination to the Senate this year. Hutchinson did not say so, but Byrd will have a better chance of avoiding a contest if he agrees to an uninstructed delegation.

2. Some liberal Democrats in Virginia feel that it would be unwise to advocate a third term for Roosevelt.

Hutchinson did not estimate how many members of an uninstructed delegation would be willing to follow the President's leadership at the convention. Some Virginia politicians guess that at least half would.

If this letter had been published with the other correspondence there would have been no tempest. The political sagacity of Tommy Corcoran may be limited. But there are practical politicians in the Roosevelt camp. In Virginia, as elsewhere, they—and not Corcoran and his aides—are in charge of the pre-convention campaigns of the liberal Democrats.

Six 'Drums' Make a Column

A PILASTER CAPITAL BEING ADJUSTED AT THOMAS JEFFERSON MEMORIAL

The Key:

1 Out of its wooden crate comes this 7-ton drum of Vermont marble, six of which go to make up each of the 54 columns being erected at the Thomas Jefferson Memorial.

2 Here the ponderous cylinder is swung carefully aloft, preparatory to lowering it with meticulous precision on the base drum (no pun intended). There can be no mistakes.

3 The second-from-the-bottom drum has now been placed atop its identical mate and workmen prepare to make the union flawless. Marble setting is no job for guessers.

The Story:

Inclement weather has seriously impeded progress on the Thomas Jefferson Memorial, which is being built in West Potomac Park, but this week's sunshine and rising thermometer have given the "full speed ahead" signal. Between December 20 and February 1 only three and a half days' work could be performed on the $3,000,000 project.

Yesterday a full crew of workmen were on the job but a far greater number was busy at the Vermont quarry, the source of the memorial's 54 columns. These men have been working six days a week to furnish the thousands of tons of marble required.

Each column will be made up of six "drums." These cylinders are carved from blocks. Six blocks are quarried for every one which is deemed suitable. There will be four columns at each of the memorial's four entrances and the remaining 38 will be distributed around the exterior and in the portico. To date 32 drums have been set.

Democrats Pit Oil Man Against Guffey

Jones Is Mentioned As a Candidate For Senate Seat

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 8.—Democratic leaders of Pennsylvania opposing the candidacy of Senator Guffey for reelection, tonight listed Walter A. Jones, wealthy oil man and road builder, high up among possibilities considered to oppose Guffey at the April primary.

David L. Lawrence, Democratic State chairman, who has called Guffey "not the strongest candidate," said that Jones was "receptive" to the idea of making the race and appeared to have the inside track.

Jones, friendly with New Deal officials in Washington, is chairman of the Pennsylvania turnpike commission, which is building a $70,000,000 toll highway across the State.

Lawrence planned to discuss the situation farther with John B. Kelly, Philadelphia city chairman, who has opposed Guffey's candidacy.

Davis Twits Guffey

By the Associated Press.

Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, defended his party yesterday against a charge of one-man ownership in Pennsylvania and twitted the chargemaker, his Democratic colleague Senator Guffey, about the hostility of his renomination within his own party.

The Republican told the Senate he was nominated three times by "free-minded, unbossed men and women" although he had "encountered the opposition of some so-called party leaders or bosses as they are sometimes termed . . . This in itself should be sufficient to refute the charge that any man or any group of any faction controls the Republican Party in my State."

Guffey told the Senate last week that M. L. Annenberg, Philadelphia Inquirer publisher, owned the Republican Party in Pennsylvania "body and soul" and now was trying to get control of the Democratic Party.

4 More Va. Roads Restricted But Ban May Be Lifted Soon

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—The State Highway Department, announcing that four roads had been added to the list restricted to vehicles of more than 5 tons gross weight, said today that if mild, dry weather continued the ban could be lifted within a week.

Engineers foresaw that the damage, while probably extensive, would be far short of the damage from the 1936 freezes.

New surface-treated roads restricted were route 207 from route 1 at Mount Carmel Church to Port Royal; route 17 from Fredericksburg to Saluda; route 14 from Gloucester Courthouse to Mathews Courthouse, and route 3 from Fredericksburg to Warsaw and Irvington.

Mrs. Gertrude Oliver, 554, suffered first degre burns in the kitchen of her home, 700 Fifth street northeast, yesterday after her dress caught fire.

She was cooking at the gas range when the wind blew the window curtains into the flames and ignited them, police said. The first spread to curtains of six other windows, and as she attempted to beat out the flames her dress was ignited. She rushed into a bedroom and threw a blanket around herself to suffocate the blaze.

234 Yacht Owners In Florida Waters Back Md. Canal

Snow Hill, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—Worcester countians advocating a proposed Pocomoke River-Chincoteague Bay inland waterway were informed today that owners of 234 yachts now in Florida ports had pledged their support to the project.

Word was received from Washington that owners of the yachts—aggregating more than 200,000 tons—had notified the War Department they would traverse the canal twice a year if it is constructed.

Mayor John O. Byrd, chairman of a committee seeking a Federal appropriation for the canal through central Worcester County, said he had received additional pledges of support from the Gibson Island yacht squadron and the Annapolis Yacht Club.

Advocates of the proposed canal contend it would save about 100 miles in the inland coastal waterway route. Opponents assert the influx of fresh water would harm oyster beds and the seafood industry.

State Sen. Hillard To Nominate Oast For Circuit Court

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Senator M. M. Hillard, of Norfolk County, said today he would nominate Edward L. Oast in the Democratic caucus Tuesday to succeed Judge W. C. Coleman on the bench of the First Judicial Circuit.

Judge Coleman has expressed to Gov. Price his intention to step down from the bench February 29 under terms of the State law for the retirement of the judiciary.

In announcing he would place the former delegate's name before the caucus, Senator Hillard said he had agreed to support any qualified man nominated for the post with the exception of A. B. Carney, former clerk of the Norfolk County Circuit Court.

Hillard said he excluded Carney, mentioned along wth Oast as a likely candidate for the office, because he did not feel the majority of his constituents would be satisfied with his selection.

Ordway Invents Traffic Light Toy to Wow Voters on Congressmen's Civil Service Stand

By Alfred Friendly.

Unpredictable and uninhibited Samuel H. Ordway, jr., former Civil Service Commissioner, has just won the joint title of inventor-of-the-week and dizziest propaganda agent for the merit system.

Ordway, now president of the National Civil Service Reform League, has perfected an infernal machine designed to show a waiting electorate just which candidate for Senate and House should be elected, on the basis of his past record as a friend of civil service.

The device, as yet unpatented, is a combination of a child's electrical question-and-answer toy, a vehicular traffic light and a portable political oracle.

In essence, it is a board with 18 spaces for the pictures of national legislators, to be filled in according to the State and Congressional districts in which it is being shown.

"Sneak Preview"

At a "sneak preview" held here last week, Ordway "gave them the needle." He touched an electrically charged wand to the thumb-tack pinning a certain picture to the board. Depending on the picture, a red, amber, or green light flashed on at the top.

The red light indicates a "partisan diehard" opponent of the merit system who should be vetoed by the voters. The amber light means the legislator is wishy-washy on the subject and should be made to declare just how much faster his heart is going to beat on hearing the mystic words "civil service." The green light indicates an okay guy for whom the voters should go down the line.

Ol' Doc Ordway, medicine-man extraordinary, threatens to circulate his politics-made-simple machine throughout the country, making his pitch before civic groups, taxpayers meetings and labor organizations.

The determining factor that will direct his staff of electrical wizards in making the right hook-ups so that a certain candidate flashes red and another comes up green, will be the individual vote of the legislators on the Ramspeck bill, Ordway says.

"Terrific," He Says Modestly

Ordway sees the measure, which is now being debated in the House and which extends civil service to about 250,000 exempt Federal employes, as a crucial test.

His organization is watching the vote as "a hawk watches both ends of a burrow of gophers," Ordway says.

As for the merits of his machine, Ordway is becomingly modest.

"It's terrific, it's colossal, it's automatic," he says. "No Congressional district can afford to be without this modern, scientific, infallible miracle of electrical ingenuity. Any child can operate it, yet its reverberations will shake the halls of Congress."

Federal employment soared to an all-time high in December, reversing a decline in the two previous months, the Civil Service Commission's latest statistical report discloses.

Largely due to a seasonal increase of 48,000 temporary postal employes for the Christmas mail, total employment was 987,538. Employment in the District, also at record high levels, was 127,597.

Increases here were mainly in the Postoffice, Navy and Interior Departments. There were decreases in the Federal Works Agency and Civil Aeronautics Authority. In the country at large, gains came in agencies affected by the defense armaments program, such as War, Navy, Panama Canal and CAA. Commerce added employes for the 1940 census.

By executive order the President has just granted civil service status to 46 employes of the Wage-Hour Division, converting that agency into an almost 100 per cent civil service organization.

The employes were the first to come to work in the new division, originally on loan from the Treasury, PWA, WPA and former National Emergency Council. After these constituted a nucleus, subsequent employes were taken from civil service rolls.

Later Congress indicated its intent for the division to take over the original employes on a permanent basis. Although there was no specific language to this effect, the intent seemed also clear to give them civil service status. The President's order added the finishing touch.

ODDENDA: U. S. Housing Authority claims to have put 170 housing projects into construction without a single serious labor dispute . . . The Patent Office Society is sponsoring a contest to pick a slogan or motto applicable to the Patent Office. It is open only to employes of the office. The closing date is Monday . . . ## Isn't This Why You Are Constipated?

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? White bread, meat, potatoes? It's little wonder you're constipated. You probably don't eat enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It's a kind of food that forms a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a movement. If this is your trouble, may we suggest a crunchy toasted cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—for breakfast. All-Bran is a natural food, not a medicine—but it's particularly rich in "bulk." Being so, it can help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. Eat All-Bran regularly, and drink plenty of water. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Congressional Wives of '76 Club Enjoy 'Homecoming' Luncheon

Wisconsin Sends Cheese, Beer and Candy; Minnesota, South Dakota, Delaware And Montana Present Items to Guests

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

WITH ALL the spirit of the soldiers of '76, the wives of Representatives who became new members of Congress this year held the February luncheon of the '76 Club at the Roosevelt Hotel. It was more than a luncheon. For members of five States it had a "homecoming note" as the industries of the five States — Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, Delaware and Montana, had sent their products to be distributed to all the guests.

Martha Ellyn

Each guest found a huge paper sack filled with gifts at her luncheon place. Santa Claus himself could have had no greater selection of gifts in his pack. From Wisconsin came cherry juice, cheese, paper cups, cigarette lights, aluminum pans, beer and candy. South Dakota sent tea biscuits, a new tinned meat product, sacks of sugar and for a door prize a necklace made of gold from the Homestake mine. Minnesota was represented by a canned meat product, and from Delaware came Nylon hose, newly launched on the market—the kind that are guaranteed to "wear and wear," and six pairs to be claimed by the person with the lucky door number. Senator John G. Townsend, jr., of Delaware, sent large red apples from his Delaware orchards. From Montana came arrow heads and cigarette boxes enhanced with Montana copper.

When the excitement of their presents had dimmed, the members were served a delicious luncheon and this is what the wives of 576 ate:

Luncheon Menu
Cream of Mushroom Soup Wafers
Baked Ham Baked Potatoes
String Beans
Hearts of Lettuce
Thousand Island Dressing
Rolls Cherry Pie
Coffee

Coming from Wisconsin, the great dairy State of the United States, where over 50 per cent of all Cheddar cheese and over 70 per cent of all Swiss cheese is made in this country, Mrs. Joshua Johns, who is president of the '76 Club, was not at a loss to tell of the use to which she would put her gift cheese. It was to be a Cheese Souffle, and the following is her recipe.

Wisconsin Cheese Souffle

Beat 3 egg whites stiff. Melt 4 tablespoons butter and add to it 4 tablespoons flour. Mix well and add 2 cups milk and cook until a thick creamy sauce forms, stirring constantly. Add 3 beaten egg yolks and beat for 2 minutes. Fold in ½-teaspoon salt, ¼-teaspoon pepper, ¼-teaspoon celery salt, ¼-teaspoon onion juice, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley and 2-3 cup grated cheese. Pour into baking dish, set in pan of water and bake in slow oven for 45 minutes. Serve in dish in which baked. Serves four.

Mrs. George S. Williams was delighted not only with a pair of new hose from her home State, but with the apples sent by Senator Townsend. When I asked her if she had a favorite apple dish, she said it was apple dumplings, English style, and gave me the recipe by which her mother has baked the dumplings and she uses, too. The following is Mrs. Williams' recipe:

Apple Dumplings, English Style

Use two medium-sized apples per person. Peel and quarter the apples. To each two apples use the following batter: add ½-cup sugar and enough water to cover. Do not let the apples become dry in cooking. To make batter, use 1 cup flour, a pinch of salt and 1½ teaspoons baking powder, and enough milk to make a stiff batter. Take the batter by tablespoonsful and put on top of apples in pan which they have been cooked. Cover with a lid and let simmer slowly for 15 minutes. These may be allowed to cook while dinner is being served. Eat hot with a sauce made of milk, sugar and nutmeg.

Cleaning Feather Pillows

You can clean the feathers in your pillows by using your vacuum cleaner in a special manner. Take off the dust bag and run the cleaner to clear all dust from the interior. Then tie a clean sugar sack tightly where the dust bag was removed, open one end of the pillow and "vacuum" the feathers into the sack. Its pores will let the pillow dust escape and the sack will retain the feathers and down. It's an operation that is recommended for outdoors, however.

Mrs. Joshua Johns (right), of Wisconsin, president of the 76 Club, and Mrs. George S. Williams, of Delaware (left), are shown arranging tables for their club's monthly luncheon and each are proudly viewing the products that had been sent them as gifts from their home State

THE FIG TREE has been a household one as far back as history goes. "Beneath the vine and fig tree" is used many times in the Old Testament to designate "home." With California producing a great supply of delicious figs in our country, we have this excellent fruit available for many an appealing dish. The Post readers know of many appetizing ways of using figs and we present the five winners in this week's recipe contest.

Caramel Cornflake Ring Is a Simple Dessert

Stir and melt in a large saucepan over heat, 1 cup brown sugar, closely packed, 3 tablespoons butter and ¼ teaspoon salt, if butter is unsalted. Fold in until well-coated, 4 cups cornflakes. Grease a 7-inch ring mold, or individual molds. Press the cornflake mixture lightly into the mold. Before the pudding is cold—in a few minutes—invert it onto a platter. Fill the center and surround the ring with sugared fruit or stewed fruit. Serve with cream, whipped cream or ice cream.

Orange Souffle

When you want a dessert that looks like a million but costs only a few cents make an orange souffle. Cut a sponge cake into 1-inch cubes and place in a slightly greased casserole. Over this pour a cup of orange juice which the sponge cubes absorb. Pour on a custard mixture next, then pile a stiff meringue over the top and brown in a slow oven.

Bread Hints

To keep bread and cake boxes sweet and clean, wipe the inside with a cloth wrung out in vinegar and water. Dry thoroughly with a clean towel.

To help keep bread fresh for several days, leave it in its wrapper in the breadbox, and fold up the paper tightly at the end after slices have been removed for serving.

C. A. R. Gets Letter Written In Gadsby's

Epistle of 1806 Tells of Journey From Newark

A letter written from Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria by Shaler Hillyer to his wife in has been given to the National Society, Children of the American Revolution, by Mrs. John A. Massey. Mrs. Massey, who is a member of the Continental Dames Chapter of the D. A. R., made the presentation to Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, national president of the C. A. R., at the February board meeting in Memorial Continental Hall yesterday.

The letter was written by Mrs. Massey's great - great-grandfather who described some of the events of his journey on horseback from Newark to Alexandria on his return to Petersburg, a town which no longer exists.

The smith, by some mishap, he said, had lamed his horse to such a degree that he had difficulty getting him as far as Chester, Pa. There he "had the good luck to swap him away by giving $80 in cash for the change—I lost by this trade $30 and still I think the trade a good one. The last horse has performed for three days very well and was it not that he is exceedingly tall, I should have no fear of his performance. I shall spare no pains consistent with my own safety in hurrying to your dear arms."

He adds, in the conclusion of his letter, "I am now at Gadsby's, in the same room where you and myself lodged not two years ago."

The letter will be placed in the room in Gadsby's Tavern that has been restored by Mrs. William H. Pouch, honorary national president of the C. A. R., and which is now being furnished by the society.

Mrs. Pouch was among those at the meeting yesterday. It was announced that 482 new members had been added to the society since January, and that seven new societies had been formed in Maine, Ohio, Michigan, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Alabama.

Announcement also was made that John Martin, of Springfield, Ohio, had won the peace declamation contest, conducted by the Ohio C. A. R., carrying an award of $200 and a four-year course in any one of nine colleges.

Last night Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke, national organizing secretary, and Mrs. Ryland Bryant, national vice president, entertained at dinner at the home of Mrs. Bryant in Chevy Chase in honor of Mrs. Pouch and Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, of Alexandria, also an honorary national president and State regent of the Virginia Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs Robert, president general of the D. A. R., was present as were local convention chairmen for the C. A. R. and members of the board.

These were: Mrs. John Francis Wetman, of Little Rock, Ark., national historian; Mrs. William Henry Belk, Charlotte, N. C., national chaplain; Mrs. Marie Beyerle, of Reading, Pa., national vice president; Mrs. Sinclair, Mrs. Pouch, Mrs. A. Dexter Beane, of Baltimore, State president for Maryland; Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, national recording secretary; Mrs. B. Harrison Lingo, national corresponding secretary; Mrs. Harry Melville Howard, national registrar; Mrs. Creyke, national organizing secretary; Mrs. Ryland Bryant, national vice president; Mrs. Carl Giroux, State president for the District; Miss Alleen Harris, national publicity chairman, all of Washington, and Mrs. Frank S. Ray, of Silver Spring, editor of the C. A. R. magazine.

Prince Georges Schoolgirls To Ask U. S. Aid for Hospital

A delegation of Prince Georges County high school girls will descend on Capitol Hill today to ask that a county hospital be established under the Federal Government's proposed $30,000,000 hospital construction program.

John Riggles, of the Prince Georges County Federation of Citizens Associations, said the delegation would visit the offices of Senator James Mead, of New York, sponsor of the hospital legislation; Senator Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas, and Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts.

The civic federation has been campaigning for three years for a county hospital. Recently District Health Officer George C. Ruhland notified health department heads in nearby Maryland and Virginia counties that Washington's hospitals were reaching their capacity and could not continue to serve the adjacent areas.

The annual farm income per family in Allegany County is $355 more than in Wicomico County, according to the results of a survey announced yesterday by the WPA.

The report listed the average farm family's income in Alleghany at $1,358 as compared to $1,003 in Wicomico.

Purpose of the survey was to compare Western Maryland and the Eastern Shore in farm aspects. Allegany county is in Western Maryland and Wicomico on the Shore.

Other items revealed by the survey were:

Medical expenses in Wicomico were 6.3 per cent of the family income as compared to 4.4 per cent in Alleghany.

Wicomico farmers valued their land higher than in Alleghany County. Average farm valuation in Wicomico was $6,460 and in Allegany, $2,921.

G. O. P. Women Hear Wife Of Rep. Vorys

Education in India Described by Speaker At League Luncheon

India, a land of contrasts, was described yesterday by Mrs. John M. Vorys, wife of Representative Vorys, of Ohio, at the luncheon meeting of the League of Republican Women, 1301 Seventeenth street.

Mrs. Vorys was born in Lucknow and lived there until she was 18. Her parents served as Methodist missionaries in India for 43 years and her father for a portion of that time was president of Lucknow College.

The British have done much to provide education for the people of India, she said, and although some of those who are now leaders have availed themselves of these educational opportunities, millions of others, because of the caste system, have declined to attend the schools.

She contrasted the native rajahs' magnificent palaces and gardens with the poverty and filth of the villages and the devoutness of the Brahmans with their attitude toward the "untouchables."

She remarked on the spiritual approach of Gandhi and Nehru in their leadership of the nationalist movement and said that the emphasis on religion in India was something with which no one could fail to be impressed.

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman entertained at the luncheon a party of 22 in honor of Mrs. William Connor and Mrs. Guy Henry. Mrs. Strickland Gillilan had as her guests Mrs. E. C. Brandenberg, Mrs. Elizabeth Northrup, Mrs. Jessie Walters. Miss Grace Burton, treasurer of the club, had a party of guests including Miss Elizabeth and Miss Rebecca Warner, Mrs. Warren J. Haines and Mrs. Maud Whitman.

Mrs. Edward L. Dyer was hostess to Mrs. Frank Murphy, Mrs. Henry L. Larsen, Miss Daisy Prentice, Mrs. G. Louis Weller, Miss Clara McQuowen, Miss Marion Fulton, and Mrs. A. M. Fulton. In Mrs. Henry Albers' party were Mrs. John G. Christopher, Mrs. Charles Fairfax, Mrs. Carl Casey, Mrs. F. H. Morhart, Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Mrs. French Myers and Miss Anne Ward. Mrs. Roland A. Kinzer had as her guest Mrs. Charles L. Gifford, wife of Representative Gifford, of Massachusetts.

Among others who attended the luncheon were Mrs. Frank Birthright, Mrs. Thomas S. Crago, Mrs. M. St. John Brownell, Miss Marion E. Meloz, Miss Anna M. Eggenhoff, Mrs. Enos Newman, Mrs. Lola K. Gingrich, Mrs. A. Rumreich, Mrs. George F. Williams, Mrs. William H. Scott, Miss Anne Kraft, Mrs. Louise Rhodes, Mrs. J. I. Speele, Miss Pauline Block, Miss Sophie Kent, Mrs. G. C. Preston.

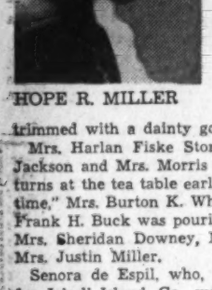
Tea-time Social Whirl Is Worthy Of the Height of the Season

Mrs. Grady Entertains at Home As Hurleys Gather Shoals of Friends In Honor of Mrs. Alfred I. duPont

By Hope Ridings Miller.

TEATIME YESTERDAY found social Washington in a partying whirl that would have done honor to the height of the season. Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, entertained in her apartment at the Highlands; and the former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick Hurley gathered in shoals of their friends in honor of Mrs. Alfred I. duPont, who arrived here yesterday from Jacksonville, Fla., and is staying at the Carlton.



HOPE R. MILLER

As usual, many guests attending one party showed up at the other before the afternoon was over, but the Grady fete was under way an hour and a half before the other began. Planned in honor of wives of California Representatives, the event was accented with lively talk, spring hats, and an air of gay informality that one finds at few official homes in Washington. The hostess, who always looks as if she had stepped out of a bankbox, wore a frock of turquoise crepe, fashioned with a floor-length skirt and trimmed with a dainty gold design.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson and Mrs. Morris Sheppard were among those who took their turns at the tea table early. When I stopped in shortly before "closing time," Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler was presiding at the tea urn, and Mrs. Frank H. Buck was pouring hot punch. Others who assisted included Mrs. Sheridan Downey, Mrs. Clarence Lea, Mrs. Harold Bowen and Mrs. Justin Miller.

Senora de Espil, who, with her husband, plans to leave tomorrow for Jekyll Island, Ga., was among the guests arriving early and then going on to the Hurley party. Mrs. Harold Walker was another, and still others included Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. James Slattery and Mrs. J. Fred Essary. Mrs. Harry Coffee and Mrs. Buck, the latter of whom had on a smart beige straw hat to match her beige fox neckpiece, were a talkative twosome in the drawing room when I went in. Mrs. Frank Waring, buzzing about busily was generally assisting, as were Mrs. Henry Dtimel, sister-in-law of the hostess, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Helen Moodie and Mrs. Irene Caldwell. Among the guests were Mrs. Dennis Chavez, Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, Mrs. Marshall Diggs, Mrs. Leland Olds, Mrs. Carroll Stewart, Miss Stella Frankfurter, Judge Marion J. Harron, Mrs. Charles F. McLaughlin and many more.

THE HURLEY PARTY meanwhile, was drawing its share of Washingtonians—hand-picked from residential, diplomatic and official circles. Mrs. Hurley was smartly turned out in a flowing frock, made with a French blue crepe skirt and a blue and silver lame bodice. Standing with her was Mrs. duPont, gowned in black lace.

Mrs. Edward R. Findenstaedt and Mrs. McCeney Werlich assisted at the tea table; and among those seen in the company were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Lewis, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mrs. William C. Gwynn, Mrs. Thurman Arnold and Commander and Mrs. William D. Thomas, who own the house in which the party was given. Mr. and Mrs. Hurley plan to return early in the spring to their home near Leesburg, Va.

CAPITAL VIGNETTE: It happened in a local store yesterday. Mrs. Francis Biddle, wife of the new Solicitor General, had just made a purchase and was talking with the saleswoman about the charge. "And do you havt an account with us?" crisply inquired the saleswoman.

"Why, no," replied Mrs. Biddle in her modest way. I used to have one—but, you see, we've just moved back here. My husband's with the Government."

"He is? And what is your name?"

"Mrs. Francis Biddle."

"Biddle? How do you spell it?" the s.w. inquired. When told, she wrote it down laboriously. "Well, Mrs. Biddle," she went on, "we always make the necessary investigation before sending out a purchase. I'll take care of it, and if everything is in order, you'll get the package tomorrow."

So out went the customer, minus purchase. The idea of a Philadelphia Biddle being subjected to "an investigation" was no end amusing to somebody standing nearby.

HERE AND THERE: Friends of Charlotte Kellogg (Mrs. Vernon Kellogg) have been enjoying her poem, "The Turning Glass—Pasadena," which appears in the current issue of Atlantic Monthly . . . Mrs. Kellogg, who, following the last war, spent much time in Poland and Belgium with her late husband (he was in charge of relief work there), has devoted most of her time in recent months to working with the Commission for Polish Relief . . . She was completing a biography of Paderewski when she was called East from her California home to organize the commission of which she is still vice chairman . . . Her daughter, Miss Jean Kellogg, is working with the Art League in New York.

WASHINGTON WAY: The Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman W. Arnold will be off to New York this evening for a brief visit. While away, they plan to go on to New Haven to see their son, Thurman, jr., who is at Yale. They will return to Washington on Tuesday or Wednesday . . . The Canadian Minister, Loring Christie, has invitations out for a dinner on February 21. . . . Mrs. Paul V. McNutt will entertain at luncheon on that same date. . . . Maud Parker (Mrs. E. W. Pavenstaedt) is completing an adventure story that has a best-seller title, if there ever was one. Can't tell you what it is, yet—sorry. . . . But while I'm on the literary line, I'd like to recommend "Adventure in Washington," Leonard Ross' new novel. It's good past-time reading.

For the Family Album—

Underwood & Underwood

—we recommend this pose of Mrs. Millard Tydings, wife of the Senator from Maryland, and her daughter, Eleanor. Mrs. Tydings and her mother, Mrs. Emlen Davies, will entertain today at the second in a series of teas planned for this season. Mrs. Aldace Walker, sister of Mrs. Tydings, will be guest of honor. Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Tydings will leave tomorrow for Palm Beach, Fla.

Mrs. Wilson Is Honor Guest At Luncheon

Senora de Boyd Is One of 14 at Party Of Mrs Meredith

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith entertained at luncheon yesterday in her home on R street. Covers were laid for 14.

Senora de Boyd, wife of the new Ambassador of Panama, who recently returned to this country and who is a niece of Mrs. Wilson, was also in the company. Others there included Mrs. Harry Woodring, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Mrs. Breckinridge Long and Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer.

Still others there were Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. James M. Helm, Mrs. Bernard B. Jones and Mrs. Joseph Washington.

Mrs. Meredith and the women's auxiliary of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, will entertain at a motion picture and reception tomorrow afternoon at Mrs. Meredith's home. The event is set for 4 p. m.

Dinner to Mark French Treaty

The French Ambassador, Count de Saint-Quentin, and Miss Anne Morgan, president of the American Friends of France, will be guests of honor at "a tribute dinner to France" on Monday evening, February 19, at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria in New York. More than a thousand guests are expected. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt is honorary chairman and Miss Mary Vail Andress is acting chairman.

Among prominent persons who have already made reservations for the dinner are Miss Rachel Crothers, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Low Pierrepont, Miss Malvina Hoffmann, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Montague, Mrs. Morgan Hamilton, Miss Marion G. MacLean, Mrs. Blaine Beale, Mrs. Henry P. Davison and Stephen H. P. Pell.

The occasion is especially significant as marking the anniversary of the signing of the treaty of commerce and defense between France and the United States 162 years ago. This was the first treaty of the United States as an independent country.

About the Town

with DUDLEY HARMON

People Working for War Relief Funds Begin to Find Themselves Tongue-Tied

MANY OF THE energetic people engaged in the very serious business of selling tickets for the numerous benefits for European relief are so overworked these days that they are becoming a bit tongue-tied in their sales talks. Mrs. Laurence Green is one of a committee which has been phoning friends about Garfield Swift's musicale to be held this afternoon at the Mayflower for the Finns. The other day, after her fiftieth call, she found herself insisting to a baffled acquaintance that the concert was for the benefit of "the twins."

Another ardent worker mailed some tickets to the Swedish Legation for a Finnish benefit and promptly the next day the envelope was returned to her. She had addressed it to "the Swinnish Legation."

At this afternoon's musicale for Finland a special arrangement of "Finlandia" will be offered by Mr. Swift, Miss Evalyn Tyner and the Pro-Musica Quartet, and pretty girls dressed in peasant costumes will usher.

PEOPLE ARE HURRYING off for North, South, East and West —any direction, it would seem, that leads out of town. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies go today for another visit to Palm Beach, where they will remain for about ten days. They were there earlier in the season for a while.

H., for the Dartmouth winter carnival, and nobody here would be a bit surprised if she were chosen queen. Incidentally, Miss Prochnik seems to have given up the idea of going to New York to look for a job as a model.*

MR. AND MRS. John W. Hanes, who gave a dinner last night at their home in Georgetown, will go shortly to Sun Valley for skiing. THE COUNSELOR of the Netherlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg will have with them this week-end the former's brother, Count Adolf van Rechteren Limpurg. He recently returned from a stay in Holland and is en route to his farm in British Columbia.

NEWS FROM ENGLAND comes in occasionally to tell us of our friends over there. Many people will be interested to hear that a daughter was born in London recently to Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Abel-Smith. Mrs. Abel-Smith, the former Peggy Moran, lived here before her marriage and ran a dress shop just off Connecticut avenue. She and her husband became engaged in Washington about a week after first meeting. Mr. Abel-Smith's brother married a niece of Queen Mary.

A CARD from Mrs. Noel Trentham, somewhere in Surrey, says that she hopes to go soon to Ontario to join Mr. Trantham. He was formerly attached to the British embassy here as financial counselor.

Inadequate Intake Of Food May Be One Of Fatigue Sources

What is fatigue? Whence comes it? Where is it located? What is its seat? While it is a general body feeling, from what structures of the body or from what derangements does it arise?

We know the answers to these questions only approximately. It may be part of an organic disease, it may be due to bad habits, or it may occur in people "who are just naturally tired." It is the commonest symptom which the physician encounters.

Analyzing the nature of fatigue, it may be any one or a combination of the following feelings: A mild tendency to yawn or spells of actual yawning. Disinclination to move the muscles. Feeling of drowsiness. Perspiration without adequate exercise. Wobbliness of the feet. Sloughing in sitting or standing. Tendency to close the eyes from time to time. Difficulty in remembering just what has been said. Difficulty in relaxing. Unusual effort needed to start anything to read, write or work. Impatience or easy irritation.

Why We Tire

The causes of fatigue are:

1. Physical exertion. This, of course, is natural fatigue and is healthy. When the muscles are used, there is an accumulation of lactic acid and it has been supposed that other "fatigue substances" are accumulated in the body; this, however, has not been proved. Prevention of exertion fatigue can be accomplished by rest pauses. Industry on a wide scale is adopting this method.

2. Nutrition. A great many people are on an inadequate total food intake or on the verge of semistarvation without knowing it. In these people fatigue occurs and creates a vicious circle. Lack of adequate food intake induces fatigue; fatigue destroys appetite. Therefore, there is a recurrence of lack of adequate food intake.

3. Inadequate sleep. This results in frequent yawning during the day, difficulty in thinking along one line for any length of time, dream like ideas.

Factors in Environment

4. Environmental factors. Light, noise, vibration and ventilation are the outstanding environmental factors as causes of fatigue. Insufficient light or glaring light are potent fatigue-breeders. Noise and vibration are the culprits in industry. One insurance company showed that when rooms used in clerical work were quieted, output increased by more than 10 per cent. Bad ventilation causes fatigue as much by the lack of movement of the air as by the temperature and humidity.

Psychological causes of fatigue are legion. Unsympathetic work, monotonous work, domestic unhappiness and many other causes operate.

How to Be Hand in Glove With Spring Fashions

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

IT'S TIME to brighten your life and wardrobe with something fresh and young-looking—just a touch of it. Gloves seem the most heartening accessory need at the present, and the ones we feature today are so classic they will stand by you for many months to come. Obviously these are Kislav doeskins, which, because of ageless beauty and lengthy life lines, have become outstanding all over the world. Kislavs really aren't doeskins at all but fine, soft French baby lamb. Despite wartime embargoes they are still arriving daily in tempting new assortments from Paris.

These gloves are as fresh as springtime itself, and their vibrant, new colors include royal blue, scandal red and a brilliant new Yippee Yellow, as well as tender foam greens, mist blues and pink mists. Fortunately, these colors are spring's authentic color threats so that buying any of these gloves now for instant wear with suits and dark woolens or crepes is an equally safe purchase for wear later on with spring clothes.

The cream of American designers (Strook for woolens, Howard Hodge for hats, Koret for bags, Arden for cosmetics and Palter de Liso for shoes) scrupulously worked out attendant color affinities to perfectly match or blend with the Kislav glove colors.

For lives filled with action, Kislav of Paris designs white or pastel shorties, above, of the famous French doeskin, guaranteed washable. Wherever these casual one-button gloves go, they are at home, for their simple style and neat hand-stitching make them classics. Always on hand, too, for cocktail or dinner dress-ups are the eight-button length washable Kislavs, left.

Making Bed Right Must Be Learned

It is not easy to make a bed—the right way. There are three things to keep in mind: the comfort of the sleeper, the appearance of the bed, and the protection of blankets and mattress. The bottom sheet must be well anchored under the mattress at top, bottom, and sides (mitered corners of course). Here's where your long sheets come in, for you must have at least 6 inches of tuck-in at each end. Next come the top sheet and blankets, well tucked in at the bottom. As for the sides, we disagree with some bedmakers. After folding the top sheet over the blankets with a generous 12 or 14 inches, we miter the corners again, at the bottom only, and leave the sides hanging free. Our reason is obvious—if blankets and top sheets are tucked under at the sides, out comes the bottom sheet when the bed is opened for the night. The bedspread, of course, covers the entire bed.

The Boss' Welcome

"Well, good morning, Miss Grubb! I'm certainly glad to see you back! How are you feeling? . . . Well, of course you'll naturally be a little weak for a few days, and you'd better take it easy—say by the way, I have a whole stack of letters I must answer right away. They've been piling up—

"No, no, not this minute—just as soon as I come back. I want to run out now and get a cup of coffee. You know that cold I had has left me weak as a cat. . . That's why I'm telling you to take care of yourself. There's nothing as important as your health, Miss Grubb.

"Now I dumped one batch of letters there on your desk that you can just answer yourself—no, I think they're on the other side . . . maybe under those newspapers. Say by the way, get those papers clipped as soon as you can, will you? They've sort of piled up. . . No, those aren't the letters I mean—look under that pile of unopened mail. . . No? . . . Well maybe they're under those books—by the way my wife wants them taken back to the rental library. . . Well anyway you'll find 'em somewhere on your desk as soon as you begin to dig out.

"We certainly have missed you, Miss Grubb. Those janitors don't know the first principles of dusting a desk. And the inside of mine is the worst mess you ever saw. I wish you'd go after it right away.

"You see, Miss Grubb, we want to get everything spick and span and well organized so we can get a lot more done around here. Now while you've been away we've been having some pretty big conferences—there've been some experts in sort of looking things over—and we've all decided that we can do a lot more to put this thing over in a big way. We've got a lot of changes in view . . . new ideas to carry out. . . I'll tell you about them when I come back. The whole thing is we're all going to have to step on the gas. That's why I'm glad you've had this good rest and can make a fresh start, because we're all going to be right on our toes.

"Now you want to keep plenty warm, Miss Grubb—and keep out of drafts. I don't want you to have a back-set. And anyway it never pays to neglect your health. You'll always regret it sooner or later.

"Now I won't be gone long, and if you'll have everything ready by the time I get back, we can sail into those letters. And say—I'm seeing nobody today. I don't care who comes—Adolf Hitler himself—stave him off. But of course don't insult anybody. Just ease them off in a nice way.

"Now, I believe that's all right now—no, say there's a memo I wish you'd get out immediately to all the office force—there are some notes on it somewhere there on your desk. And I wish you'd look up the correspondence on those cases I've jotted down on my pad. And another thing—the papers in that Hokum case are lost and I wish you'd find 'em right away. And say—get me a map of Cass County, Mo., will you? And the railroad schedules to Zinchville, Ark.? And a copy of The Bugle for a week ago Wednesday?

"Now that's all—no you'd better call Horace Putter and tell him I'll meet him for lunch . . . and notify Mark Geezer about that Kangaroo Club committee meeting will you? And I think you'd better make me an appointment for the dentist about Saturday morning—and oh yes, give my wife a ring about what new books she wants from the library.

"Well I'll be back in a few minutes . . Yes, that's everything I can think of right now. And anyway, I don't want to load too much on you the first day. I think you'd better take it a little easy. And now don't get excited or hurried. Just relax. You know, Miss Grubb, there's nothing more important than taking care of your health."

Vanity Table Easily Made

Lovely as a rainbow are the three lace-edged ruffles of the cover. The top one is of crisp white organdy flowered in yellow and blue, the middle one is of gay yellow organdy, the bottom one dainty baby blue. Pretty, too, are ruffles of dotted swiss, shading from pale rose to deep cherry red.

And to have a really delightful ensemble stitch up a 3-ruffled bed spread, matching your dressing-table in colors and material.

To make the table itself, simply nail to a packing box a separate top of wood, kidney bean shaped as in our diagram. Cover the top with a white sateen lining and the flowered organdy, tack in place. Then make a straight sateen skirt lining and you're ready to attach the dainty organdy ruffles.

So the ruffles will be perkily full, cut them twice as long as the distance around the front and sides. For a table about 28 inches high, you'd make the top ruffle 6 inches deep, the middle one 9 inches, the bottom ruffle 18 inches.

After gathering the upper ruffle, finish top edge with blue ribbon binding and baste to lining. Finish tops of other ruffles with ½-inch hems and, for ease in laundering, attach to lining with double-snap tape.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, HOW TO MTKE A DOLL HOUSE AND OTHER HAND-MADE GIFTS, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Barrymore Topic Of Day; Mabel Boll Remarries

New York, Feb. 8.

BROADWAY has been pretty much obsessed by the return of its prodigal son ever since Jack Barrymore opened up his simple little show called "My Dear Children" at the late Mr. Belasco's theater. You may have heard that Broadway is a very tough street, and occasionally it is. More often it is the most sloppily sentimental stretch of ground on earth, and its denizens will cry buckets of tears over a broken doll-baby in the gutter.

Alice Hughes

So while most of the cash customers may laugh at Barrymore's antics, Broadway blubberers prefer to sob. They remember that he left us 17 years ago fairly young and beautiful, after a great record in "Hamlet," and now comes back to us looking 25 years older, and appearing in an opus far beneath the talents of such an able thespian.

When the piece opened, the critical comments were fascinating. One dignified gentleman who also sticks a mean dagger when irked in the theater, took the romantic view of this aging man who now clowns through triviality. "He is still the most gifted actor in this country," says the critic, and winds up his piece with "he is nobody's fool in 'My Dear Children,' but a superbly gifted actor on a tired holiday." These are very nice words for any dramatic critic to write, as the breed is apt to be waspish.

I had a good time at Jack's show, and while I am anything but a hard character, I couldn't quite pump up that much sentiment for the

MABEL BOLL

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: The news that Mabel Boll, long called the "Queen of Diamonds," has married her fifth husband, a harp player, down in Florida, brings back sharply the days when Mabel and Peggy Joyce were trying to out-sparkle each other at theatrical first nights. It was usually judged a dead heat, for both packed plenty of startling ice. But neither is seen about town much any more, and these nights, when I see Mrs. Wallace Orr wearing the Jonkers diamond, bearing a $1,000,000 price tag, at a night spot, I wonder if Mabel and Peg were really so glittering after all.

A LOCAL store bursts out with the new long-line girdle from Paris which doesn't pinch the waist, but gives a girl the desired slim, tubular effect.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Is It Divorcee's Fault That Admirers Urge Light Love-Making Upon Her?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a divorcee, 27 years old. My former husband and I came to a parting of the ways about three years ago, after a brief and stormy marriage. I was granted a divorce less than a year later, and shortly afterward had the good luck to secure a Government job here in Washington, where I had gone to school in my teens.

I renewed several old friendships which led naturally to new acquaintances and in due course was casually included in a pleasant circle of "young marrieds," as the "odd woman" to pair off for bridge, dinner, etc., when a bachelor friend needs entertaining. Also, of course, I have acquired a few beaux on my own initiative (through office associations, etc.), but all this boils down to one aggravating, recurrent problem.

The problem is this: All of the eligible men I have met here seem to assume that because I have been married, I am either hungry for or vulnerable to their "strictly dishonorable" attentions. They seem to think the barriers are down, so far as lovemaking goes. I happen to live alone, in a small apartment which I have furnished very attractively with my own things, and this seems to further complicate the situation. You would think, from the attitude of my "admirers," that I had created an establishment for the purpose of lapsing into a loose way of living.

I can truthfully say that I have exhausted every ingenuity for setting them straight, without actually forbidding them the premises or striking the Victorian, "Sir-how-dare-you" pose. And still they continue their insinuating approach and boldly suggestive remarks. I would like you to tell me, if you can, how to handle the situation; how to convince them that I do not consider myself to be, and do not intend to be treated as, "damaged goods."

These men are not the libertine type. They are the kind I would have said (before my recent experiences) were "nice boys;" well educated, well mannered and highly respected by their friends and professional associates. How do you analyze the difficulty and what would you advise me to do?

DESPONDENT.

Frankness Triumphs Over Audacity

DEAR DESPONDENT: The difficulty has to do, I think, with your own failure to develop a sophisticated technique for dealing with a peculiarly modern situation. You must face the fact that an unmarried woman has (theoretically, at least) the psychic protection of emotional inexperience; (which is to say, a considerable genuine unawareness of the biological significance of an intense mutual romantic attraction); whereas a woman who has been married has discarded that shield, actually and symbolically.

However, the woman-of-experience who finds herself restored to spinster status, has an equally efficacious protection in a disarmingly honest acceptance of the so-called facts of life, if and when they break through the surface of her social negotiations. If her sense of humor (rightly enough) prohibits her adopting a "Sir-how-dare-you?" attitude, she can always say (in effect), "Yes, I know; BUT—," and with serene detachment and unanswerable logic dismiss a tentative proposition with respect-compelling finality.

Or, if she has a subtle intelligence and a realistic appreciation of the forthright masculine nature, she can combine so much good humored affection for her beaux with such buoyant self-sufficiency as to engage their loyal friendship, without letting the individual relationship drift in the direction of an emotional tug-o'-war.

You have in the one a defensive technique; and in the other, an "offensive" protection of your position. (And who was the military strategist who said, "A good offensive is the best defense?") Yet the success of either technique and in the other an solute sincerity of the woman's stand against dalliance.

It is safe to say that the woman-of-experience cannot risk the margin of emotional adventuring in courtship which her inexperienced sister might carry off gracefully. Whatever favors she concedes are construed to her disadvantage, since the average man takes it for granted that she knows "what it's all about," (as the phrase goes); and so proceeds to the hopeful conclusion that if she will yield in part, she may yield entirely, if sufficiently urged. Wishful thinking, of course; but because it is, the foresighted divorcee will be on her guard against providing any basis for such a train of thought.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Saving Dishes

Be careful, when stacking your best china and glassware, not to pile them too high. To keep the articles from scratching you had better put soft paper napkins between each. Heavy glass dishes usually are too heavy to be stacked on china dishes. And take care not to break the handles of the cups against the sides of the closet. Careful handling will save the dishes.

Pull those laces good and tight across the instep of your skate shoes, says Diane Cummings, author of "Figure Skating as a Hobby," as she demonstrates what she means. Don't wear heavy socks or stockings underneath them, either, she advises.

When you get out on a crowded rink, don't race in any old direction; travel with the traffic. If you're a top-notch skater, stay toward the outside (that's customary on most rinks). If you want to figure skate, get in the center. If you're a beginner, keep in between unless your rink reserves a section for beginners.

Don't ask expert skaters to join you if you're just beginning, but if they offer to help you, that's another question.

Don't neglect to pick up things you may drop—scarves, combs or gloves. Other skaters may get a spill if they skate into them.

If you figure-skate or play hockey, don't move all over the place. Such evolutions cut up the ice, so keep them confined to one section.

Senate Votes Road Fund Syphon Ban

Hot Debate Precedes Passage by 24 to 11; Va. House Approves Tourist Camp Bill

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8.—The Senate today passed, 24 to 11, the Weaver-Norris-Robinette joint resolution for a constitutional amendment to prevent diversion of segregated highway funds.

The vote followed the most spirited debate in the Senate since the 1940 General Assembly convened.

Immediately afterward the Senate passed unanimously a resolution by Senator William A. Wright, of Essex, to declare an anti-diversion-policy for the 1940 Legislature. Wright, who is opposed to diversion but also to writing an anti-diversion amendment into the constitution, offered his resolution in an effort to block the Weaver-Norris-Robinette resolution. The Wright resolution would have offered members an opportunity to declare themselves against diversion while opposing the amendment.

Tourist Camp Bill Voted

Meanwhile, the House passed by a vote of 82-2 today the Quesenbery-Miller-Pruner bill providing for the licensing and regulation of tourist camps.

The bill was shorn yesterday of a provision which would have required those seeking accommodations to present their auto drivers' permits.

In addition to passing the tourist camp bill, the House advanced to third reading in line for passage tomorrow the Hunter bill adding important safety provisions to the mining laws and continuing the division of mines under the State Department of Labor. Bills offered in both Houses to separate the mine laws' administration from the Department of Labor have been killed

The House ran into warm debate on a bill adding roads in State parks to the State highway system when Delegate J. T. Coleman, jr., of Nelson, offered an amendment requiring the highway department to take over all entrances from public highways to public schools. The amendment was adopted 51-30 and the bill passed 70 to 20.

Delegate Leon Bazile, of Hanover, charged Coleman's amendment would add 4,000 miles of road to the secondary system.

Straw Man Seen Created

The long-awaited debate over the proposal to amend the constitution to prohibit diversion of gasoline and automobile license tax revenues started when Senator William A. Wright, of Essex, who has offered a resolution to declare an anti-diversion policy for the 1940 session in an effort to block the Weaver-Norris-Robinette resolution for the constitutional amendment, opposed the constitutional amendment in a vigorous speech, and Senator Robinette replied. Other Senators arose immediately to ask for the floor.

Wright said the vote in the courts of justice committee to bring the resolution to the floor didn't represent the sentiment of the committee on the resolution itself. He said its proponents were setting up a straw man and asked them to name any "vultures" they might see hovering.

He asserted the real cry for the legislation came from cement, oil and gasoline and other interests and not from the farmers or people generally. He also cited the Citizens Road League.

Senator Robinette, a patron of the resolution for a constitutional amendment this year and two years ago, said the Citizens Road League did not furnish him the inspiration, nor to the other patrons. He said it passed the Senate two years ago, was approved by a House committee and defeated on the House floor during the final hour of the session.

Referring to Wright's statement that the road league was the principal advocate of the resolution, and that no farmers appeared at the committee hearing, Robinette said that 200,000 farmers were represented officially.

Hunt Season Changed

The House also passed the E. B. Moore bill providing a November, December, January and February open season for the hunting and trapping of foxes in Frederick County; the Fuller Senate bill making it unlawful to kill homing pigeons; the Ferguson House bill authorizing county governing bodies to acquire lands for sewage disposal purposes at county seats; the Davis-Ruffin House bill establishing as a permanent record a card system used in Princess Anne County, and the Davis-Blackwell House bill authorizing the State corporation commission to receive appropriations, grants and donations for use in the development and promotion of aviation.

The Senate passed the Lewis House bill enabling a married woman to give power of attorney to her husband in the transfer of real estate.

Passage followed a brief but sharp debate. Vivian Page, Senator from Norfolk, said the bill took away a protection from a married woman, making it possible for some one to defraud her. Chairman R. O. Norris, of the courts of justice committee, said a married woman could not sign deeds herself and that the bill would allow her merely as a matter of convenience to delegate the power.

Also passed before the Senate plunged into a debate on the resolution for a constitutional amendment to prevent diversion of highway funds, were the following bills:

Neff House bill requiring a department of agriculture inspector to serve as a weigher at certain livestock auction markets.

Norris Senate bill enabling the division of markets to license as inspectors persons not employes of the division, for inspection of agricultural products provided that their work is regularly checked.

Va. Utility Plans $3,500,000 Construction

Largest Budget Item $2,000,000 Plant At Alexandria

A budget calling for expenditure of $3,500,000 in construction has been prepared for the Virginia Public Service Co. and its subsidiaries for 1940, according to a statement released yesterday from the company's main office at Alexandria. The budget does not include any funds previously allocated to the maintenance of present facilities.

Largest single item in the budget is a $2,000,000 appropriation for a 15,000-kilowat steam generating plant to be built adjacent to the present Alexandria power plant. Preliminary work has already been started on the addition, which was authorized three weeks ago by Alexandria city council after having been previously approved by the Virginia State corporation commission.

Exclusive of the new steam generating plant, new construction in the city of Alexandria and Arlington, Fairfax, Loudoun and Fauquier Counties is expected to cost $146,000. A major item is the proposed increase in the capacity of the Clarendon substation, where the carrying capacity is to be increased to 4,000 volts. Work will begin around March 1, and the project will cost approximately $42,000.

According to F. B. Ostermueller, publicity manager, most of the money spent in the northern Virginia area will be devoted to line extensions and improvements necessary to keep pace with an extensive building boom now underway in the area served.

Airport Suit Delayed

A suit filed by Orman B. Ewing, of Washington, against the National Airport Corporation, of Arlington, scheduled for hearing in the United States Court for the Eastern District of Virginia at Alexandria yesterday, was continued until a later date at the request of the plaintiff's attorney, Walter I. Young. The delay was requested in view of the fact that a material witness is ill and unable to testify.

Ewing is asking $11,750 in back wages from the airport, which allegedly employed him as public relations counselor and publicity director in connection with a campaign to force closure of Military road by the United States Government.

Day of Prayer

A special children's service is scheduled at the Washington Street Methodist Church at 5 p. m., with Miss Margie Purvis as leader, while the Second Presbyterian Church will be the scene of the evening program at 8 o'clock, with Miss Francis Peyton in charge.

A program for colored participants will be held at St. John's Baptist Church at 8 o'clock, under the direction of Mrs. Mary E. Dorsey.

Supt. Wilson added that through the cooperation of the State police, county police, fire department, Red Cross and the Community Chest great aid was given sufferers during the freezing weather and in moving the sick to hospitals. In many cases the patients had to be carried some distance, due to snow-blocked roads to automobiles.

Virginia Bill Lets Arlington Reduce Speeds

Measure Would Allow Limit Under 55 Miles On State Highways

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Proposed legislation which would permit the Arlington County Board to establish maximum speed limits under the 55-mile-an-hour State law was introduced in the General Assembly today.

Identical bills giving boards of supervisors in counties with population density of not less than 600 to the square mile the right to set and enforce speed limits were introduced in the House by Delegate Charles R. Fenwick, and in the Senate by Senator William D. Medley.

Sponsors of the measure said it had the approval of the State highway commission and the division of motor vehicles. They said the purpose of the bill was to eliminate speeding, which was creating a hazardous condition on certain main highways and boulevards traversing the thickly settled metropolitan area of Arlington County.

While a speed limit of 55 miles an hour may not be excessive in other less populous areas, proponents of the bill said many Arlington County highways actually are in the same category with city streets, in that they traverse solidly built up areas.

Many accidents have occurred in the county in recent years, and the motor fatality rate has been mounting, it was said.

The bill as drawn would affect no other county in the State.

Montgomery Bingo Legal For Charity

So Wilkinson Rules In Reviewing '36 Act Barring Gambling By Other Groups

Bingo is legal in Montgomery County, Md., provided it is staged by a group within the purview of the 1936 act, State's Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson ruled yesterday.

The Montgomery County commissioners had halted granting of permits for bingo and similar games pending a ruling by the State's attorney or the attorney general on whether the new 1939 gambling law conflicts with the 1936 act.

The 1936 act, which was subject of a referendum, granted authority to the county commissioners to issue permits to charitable, civic, benevolent, fraternal and volunteer fire department organizations provided the funds collected were devoted entirely to the group sponsoring the affair.

The 1939 act provides drastic penalties for operating a lottery and even makes it a misdemeanor to have a lottery or numbers ticket in possession.

Wilkinson said he saw no conflict and that last summer he had conferred with State Senator Robert Peter, who had assured him there was no intent on the part of the Legislature to repeal the 1936 act. "The real test is whether the permit is requested by a bona fide civic, religious, charitable or volunteer fire department group," Wilkinson said.

County Meeting Feb. 29

Election of a permanent chairman will feature a meeting of the county congress of the United Democratic Organization of Montgomery County, Md., February 29 at the Richard Montgomery High School, Rockville, Md.

The 800 delegates to the congress, representing the various Democratic groups of the county, also are expected to determine the stand to be taken by the county organization in the contest between Senator Radcliffe and Howard W. Bruce, Democratic national committeeman, for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator from Maryland. Senator Radcliffe is a candidate for reelection.

Considerable dissatisfaction has been fomenting in the county because of the long delay in calling the meeting. State Senator Robert Peter, who was chairman, announced his resignation as chairman last April in order to devote his time to his law practice and because of ill health.

Since Peter's resignation, Lacy Shaw, chairman of the Democratic State central committee for the county, has been handling the functions of the congress chairman, particularly with reference to job indorsements.

It is expected that Thomas Earle Hampton, president of the board of Montgomery County commissioners, will be elected permanent chairman.

Unemployment Up In Montgomery, Noyes Reports

Unemployment in Montgomery County, Md., has increased considerably in the past month, Alfred D. Noyes, supervisor of county aid, declared yesterday in submitting his quarterly report to the Montgomery County Commissioners.

"The situation has not reached such proportion as to be alarming nor are there indications that there will be a critical period this winter," Noyes said.

He pointed out that this is the season most unfavorable for farm laborers and construction workers seeking employment.

His report showed that in the quarter ending December 31, expenditures totaled $18,107.62 and reimbursements amounted to $16,204.68, leaving a net cost to the county of $1,902.94.

Enjoy the SCOTCH WITH A STORY

An elephant never forgives or forgets. Captain White witnessed proof of this fact in Cambodia ten years ago. An elephant had been taught by his keeper, a fruit peddler, to recognize the value of coins by their sound as visitors dropped them into his cage. He would toss the coppers to his keeper and receive bananas in exchange. Once a French sailor tried to pass off a lead slug on the unsuspecting beast. As the coin dropped to the ground with a thud, the elephant eyed the sailor scornfully. The sailor departed in great hilarity. When he returned much later for another laugh, he was wearing a spotless, white dress uniform. The elephant was there to greet him with two gallons of water, which he had stored in his trunk. Yes, the elephant did not forgive and the sailor never forgot. The taste of White Horse Scotch is unforgettable, too. The smooth, robust flavor of this famous Scotch lingers in your memory and reminds you why White Horse has lived on through the centuries. Why not remember to enjoy White Horse today? You'll find it in every fine bar and package store from one end of the earth to the other. But nowhere will you find the equal of this glorious Scotch. Match White Horse if you can!

Godoy's Try In Garden To Attract $100,000 Gate

Chilean Challenger 7-to-1 Underdog; Betting Centers on How Long He'll Last

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 8.—Joe Louis makes the ninth defense in his record-breaking run as world's heavyweight champion in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night, and at this writing not a creature was stirring who would predict Arturo Godoy, of Chile, could take the title away from him.

A crowd of between 18,000 and 19,000 customers is expected to sit in on the proceedings, contribute to a gate of over $100,000, and thereby make the fifth straight appearance for Louis in the Garden with a "pot" running into six figures. The first preliminary is slated for 8:30 p. m. (E. S. T.) and the big doings at 10 p. m.

The Brown Bomber is 1 to 7 to continue bombing against the Chilean fisherman, where he left off against Bob Pastor in Detroit last September, and most betting is on just how long the rough, tough South American way can last before becoming the dusky destroyer's eighth straight knockout victim.

Since Joe won the championship from old Jim Braddock in '37, only Tommy Farr, the durable Welshman, has gone the 15-round Derby distance against Louis.

Roof Fell In

Godoy, as long as he stays in his crouch, will be fully conscious of the evening's proceedings. Tony Galento showed that a crouching, bobbing fellow can enjoy himself with Joe. However, the first time Tony "came to the surface" last June, the roof fell in on him. So with Arturo—and this department picks him to stay submerged—and on hand—for one-third of the route, with Louis flattening him any time after the fifth.

Both fighters were as confident tonight as Babe Ruth calling his home-run shot. Louis, who has made a few predictions since Max Schmeling made him eat his words in their first fight, said his usual brief piece about the fight ending "Jes' as soon as I tag him a solid punch."

More voluble was Godoy, who has trained hard through eight long weeks for this shot. "I am confident I'll be the first South American to take the championship," he told the folks.

Louis Heavier

Chief interest in his chances centered in Godoy's body-punching. He is better than fair belting at the other guy's midsection, and the Bomber's tummy has never been seriously tested before. Usually his opponents haven't had time to try.

The punch-tossers slept in their respective training camps—Louis at Pompton Lakes, N. J., and Godoy at

Terps' Zone Defense Futile in First Half As Host Team Takes 24-Point Lead; Only 1 Field Goal Made by Maryland in 1st Half

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Feb. 8.—Washington and Lee's vastly improved basketeers completely bottled up Maryland's vaunted fast break here tonight and rollicked to a 39-19 victory over the Old Liners in a Southern Conference affair.

The Generals played superior basketball in every department with Capt. Leo Reinartz and Ronnie Thompson, a pair of classy Washington and Lee guards, dropping back fast on every Maryland offensive thrust. The Terps were bewildered at every turn.

The visitors had not counted from floor until 13 minutes of first half were gone, when Art Woodward hooked one from the foul circle. It was only Maryland field basket during the entire first half, which ended with the Generals leading, 29-5.

G. W. Turns Back Toledo Five, 47 to 37

Special Dispatch to The Post

Toledo, Ohio, Feb. 8.—The clever George Washington five defeated the Toledo University basketball team here tonight, 47 to 37.

Outside of the first few moments of the game, Toledo never had a chance. It started out with a lead but was overtaken when Jones shot a sensational basket giving George Washington the lead, 17-16. Gerber, Toledo star, connected for a basket and Toledo again led 18-17. Zumie then put over a fine throw which placed Washington ahead, 19-18. From this point on the visitors slowly forged ahead until they were in front at the end of the first half, 26-22.

George Washington came back strong in the second half, its defensive play was brilliant and kept Toledo off stride. Toledo tried hard but were never able to come near tying the score.

Gilham, Comer and Zumie played a great offensive game for the visitors. Comer and Gilham each made 12 points and Zumie 11. Garber and Jones also played a great defensive battle. For Toledo, Gerber and Quinn were the stars.

Little-Known Pro Gets 63 To Top Field

Joe Coria, of St. Paul, Says, 'Take My Picture With Snead,' at End

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 8.—One of the babes of the winter trail shouldered golf's biggest names to the rear today as 27-year-old Joe Coria, of St. Paul, matched Brackenridge Park's competitive course record with a 63 in the pro-amateur event of the $5,000 Texas Open tournament.

Fragile, handsome Coria, out on his first winter tourney excursion, cautiously felt his way around the compact, wooded first nine in three strokes below par and then showered five birdies on the incoming nine for 33, 30—63.

The icy youngster didn't let up until he had hammered in a curling putt on the home green, then, dodging from one cameraman to another, he exclaimed:

Two native Texans were just behind Coria's individual score, Jim Demaret of Houston, leading money winner on the tour after his Oakland and San Francisco triumphs, and Ray Mangrum, Oakmont, Pa., each carded 65's.

Charles Farlow of Burlingame, N. C., stroked a 66.

Benning Awakens; Horses Start Drills

Nature Puts Spring in Air So Horsemen Begin to Put Airy Spring in Legs of Thoroughbreds at District's Own Track

By Walter Haight

Last month was far from June in January and yesterday wasn't exactly July 8 on February 8. However, it was a nice enough day to mark the first real training of the horses stabled at Washington's Benning Track. With a bright sun shining many of the thoroughbreds and their handlers saw their shadows for the first time this year. While hundreds of horsemen and horses are wintering and racing in Florida, California, Cuba and Louisiana, we have our own turf colony which passes the cold months, the gap from Bowie to Bowie, at the scene that marked the last legalized racing in the Nation's Capital.

Benning, always referred to by horsemen as "Bennings," was a beehive of activity yesterday. Although the trainers had to wait until after 10 o'clock when the track thawed, upward of 50 horses galloped out kinks developed from long confinement and a few breezed. Until yesterday, exercise for these horses had been confined to walks around the shed row or over the "straw ring" put down outside by Trainer Elmer Trueman.

There was plenty of proof that spring can't be far away. The stable help, confined to the tack room oil stoves and the scrap wood "bullies" during the cold wave, had transferred their social headquarters to the sunny side of a shed. Everywhere, it seemed, men, horses and dogs were on their toes.

New Racing Era

Spring always is the start of a new era in racing, even if the boys rush it a bit. Last year's bad breaks, headaches, heartaches are forgotten past performances. Bowie, Pimlico, Havre de Grace are coming up with purses for the small horsement and stakes for the big shots.

Horses have been freshened, old ailments have been arrested by long rest and treatment. New 2-year-olds are being readied for their first racing.

I was greeted by Elmer Trueman, unofficial mayor of the Benning track. Elmer, a Southern boy who grew up in the horse game, brought out Toddle On, the Maryland Futurity winner. The daughter of Bud Lerner and race Troxler appeared as round as a butter ball.

"Looks like you've been feeding well," I remarked.

"See this," said Trueman, taking some oats in one hand and some hay in the other. "It's real stuff. Western oats and Grade A hay. This is ham and cabbage for horses."

Trueman also showed me Woodchappoer, a 3-year-old son of Woodcraft, Gino Thor and a promising 2-year-old named Dunemall by Dunlin. He has five other horses that he expects to have ready for Bowie.

Trains Own Horses

He revealed that, despite offers, he will confine his interests this year to racing horses owned by Mrs. Trueman and himself.

Perhaps the best of the horses now at Benning is Clodion, frequent stake winner. The son Pharamond II, which accounted for winnings of more than $18,000, galloped around the track twice under the watchful eye of Trainer Lester H. Smith. Incidentally, Smith is right at home at Benning, having ridden there when the track was in flower back in 1902.

Smith is conditioning only Clodion now, but is hopeful of obtaining charge of other horses before the big action begins. Clodion has as his objective the Inaugural Handicap at Bowie on April 1. He is named for several Maryland and New England stakes. How Clodion will go opening day at Bowie depends a lost on whether the weather remains open.

Jockey W. G. Jackson, who last rode in Maryland in 1935, is doing the saddle work for Smith and will ride for him. The Clairmore, Okla., boy, weighs around 120, but says

Navy Baseball Battery Begins Indoor Drills

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 8.—A suggestion of spring sports came this week at the Naval Academy, when Max Bishop, varsity baseball coach, managed to ease enough space in the armory from the basketers to start his battery candidates working. The whole squad will report about March 1, and the first match is with the University of Vermont on March 30.

Some candidates for pitching jobs are ready, among which are Howard Schoenbaum and Tom Turner, juniors, and both southpaws, and Norman Smith, soph, who pitched for the undefeated Plebes last year.

The District Boxing Commission's ruling yesterday sustaining the actions of its officials last Monday night in declaring Natie Brown the loser to Mickey McAvoy on a foul blow exhibits a keen understanding of the finer instincts of Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn that is peculiarly accurate and at the same time most accommodating.

HAILEY

Right in tune with the times, the apital's fistic fathers foresaw the possibility of a return "fight" between Our Hero, Natie, and the paunchy anonymity that is McAvoy and kindly voted to hold Brown's automatic 30-day suspension in abeyance "pending the result of a rematch."

Not being one to keep the Boxing Commission "pending," Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn immediately rushed to the forefront and announced that after doing everything but get down on bended knees he had "persuaded" Mickey and Natie to continue their farce in another eight-round match Monday night in Turner's Arena.

Thus Washington's fight public—about as understandable in its reactions as is the Boxing Commission's ability to furnish obliging rulings for Goldie—appears to be in for another kick in the teeth.

It must be admitted, however, that the commission—probably better than anyone else—appreciates the caliber of the fight which it now condones, for in a final paragraph of the ruling is conveyed the opinion of that body concerning last week's three-round comedy which had everyone singing "Roll Out the Barrel" before the first act was over.

"In a statement credited to Brown . . . Brown states that McAvoy deflected with his gloves blows that would have been fair. McAvoy was wide open, could have been and was being hit with most any sort of punch—particularly to the body."

Then, apparently haunted by the vision of another wild punch by Brown landing in the folds of the triple-chinned McAvoy, the commission said "if such a rematch is made the commission will call particular attention to its antifoul rule and will instruct the matchmaker that no purses will be paid until specifically authorized by the commission."

The boxing body's mimeographed decision also pointed out that "the doctor, the referee, both judges, the commission's secretary, the press row and spectators on three sides of the arena saw the blow and agreed it was a damaging blow . . . Neither the undersigned nor any official or spectator questioned was of the opinion that the blow was deliberate. Brown was well ahead on points and there was no apparent reason for his desiring to "foul out."

That paragraph leaves out one side of the arena and at least one prominent boxing official who thought there was "something rotten in Denmark," as the saying goes, about both the decision and the blow that ended the business.

And nothing has been said about the opinions of the official who breathed a fiery, "I had a premonition something like this would happen," and refused to have anything to do with the return match.

Perhaps it's just as well. Washington's fight public, such as it is, appears insenible to kicks in the teeth, judging from the turnout to see Natie start his bombastic comeback. Everyone knew the word for Natie and Mickey long beforehand. They knew Natie was supposed to win—that McAvoy was a pug whose past was as dark as a London blackout. Still, the largest crowd since the indoor season began was on hand.

And now they're going to slap the fight fans' other cheek with a rematch between two fighters whose status as pugilistic "bums" is unquestioned. The official whose fears that the Brown-McAvoy fight would hit such a low level in presentable fighting is now in position to see them realized when Natie and Mickey begin their great waltz anew.

There isn't a fan who saw last Monday night's business who won't agree that Natie is capable of knocking out Mickey at any appointed time. Natie will tell you so himself. A couple of light taps to McAvoy's flabby midsection sent him to the canvas last week just about ready to stay there before luck favored him with a blow low enough to be called foul.

Natie says he was knocked dizzy by a right hand and didn't know where he was hitting—according to Goldie's story. Goldie now pictures Mickey as a "rough, tough baby"—his favorite description—and is all set to add insult to injury with the second chapter of the Natie Brown-Mickey McAvoy affair, a comedy in eight acts, or less.

Rickey Dislikes Other Clubs, Picking Cards for Pennant

Cites Weakness in Infield; McKechnie Picks Own Team

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 8.—Branch Rickey, master mind of the St. Louis Cardinals, is yelping about the rest of the National League making his club a winter book pennant favorite.

"It's a conspiracy, that's what it is," he complained during his visit this week. "These other clubs are just trying to get the pressure off themselves and on us. Why we might be the biggest surprise of the season—in the wrong way, I mean.

"We haven't settled that infield problem. Yes, we're counting on Martin Marion for shortstop and that will free Jimmy Brown for some other spot. But we don't know yet whether he'll play second or third and we can't expect him to keep moving back and forth."

A Little Misunderstanding

"What are you fellows all picking on us for . . . why should," he started to inquire of McKechnie.

Walter (Spike) Briggs, jr., youthful vice president of the Detroit Tigers, whom Commissioner K. M. Landis relieved of half a million dollars in cash and playing talent, now takes a lawyer with him everywhere he goes . . . at least that's what he told his intimates when he introduced a stranger to them at the various baseball sessions this week . . . and the local grapevine hears Landis will move out of Belleair, Fla., and go to Sebring when Larry Macphail and his Brooklyn Dodgers begin congregating at Belleair.

Vander Meer in Shape

Cincinnati and Pittsburgh might come up with a trade before the season starts . . . Managers and owners of the two clubs were in several huddles Tuesday . . . Frankie Frisch, incidentally, is going to put his Pirates through two workouts a day at their San Bernardino training camp instead of the one that Pie Traynor always preferred . . . Manager Bill Terry of the Giants is going to his Florida camp by way of Memphis . . . Johnny Vander Meer, who lives in New Jersey, has gone to Cincinnati and will leave for camp from there . . . He's been working out in a gym and feels in his best condition, he will have you know . . . His wedding with Lois Stewart, of Scranton, Pa., is being delayed because "I don't want to spend my honeymoon in a training camp."

Roy Cullenbine showed everybody who cared to look his $25,000 check (No. 2030) for signing with the Dodgers, but some folks still figure there's a catch to that much dough . . . The club's explanation is this: Cullenbine was offered a total of $30,000 for signing and one year's pay, cut up any way he wanted. That is he could have had a $20,000 bonus and $10,000 salary, but he chose to take $25,000 bonus right now and $5,000 during the season.

Busy Week-End For Charlotte Hall Athletes

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlotte Hall, Md, Feb. 8.—Charlotte Hall Military Academy athletes wound up preparations today for one of the busiest week-ends of sports in which Academy teams have engaged in many years.

The basketball team will see action in three games in four days, playing tomorrow night, Saturday and Monday. Coach W. A. Stephens' court team will travel to Silver Spring tomorrow night for a return game with Montgomery-Blair High School and will be seeking revenge for an earlier 33-to-21 defeat at the hands of the Blair five.

On Saturday afternoon the Cadet five will face Towson Catholic High School here in a Maryland "B" Conference battle, while Monday's game, also to be played here, will be another "B" Conference game against Baltimore School of Printing.

Swimming also will play an important part in the Cadets' sports bill-of-fare, for Coach Fred Hughes' tank squad will engage in a dual meet with the Southeast Boys Club in Washington on Saturday afternoon.

Georgetown Relay Choice In Feature

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 8.—Washington colleges and schools will be conspicuous among the nearly 60 organizations which will send more than 450 athletes into action in the University of Maryland-Fifth Regiment games here Saturday night.

Georgetown, with a heavy entry in the collegiate and A. A. U. sections, appears the outfit to beat for the point trophy in each class, and also will be the choice in the mile relay race. The Hoyas face Maryland and North Carolina in the meet's closing feature.

Catholic U. will defend its Mason-Dixon Conference relay title in a field of five and will present a second quartet and its best men in the individual tests. Maryland, in addition to its relay four and a pack of entries in the A. A. U. and collegiate point scoring tests, will have Jim Kehoe in the classic Oriole 660 and Mason Chronister in the Governor's mile, the games' headliner.

Kehoe Faces Test

Sanford Goldberg, of the Millrose A. A., will be the biggest menace to Kehoe in a field of six ace runners in the Oriole 660, while Chronister will match strides with Archie San Romani and Blaine Rideout, milers of international fame, and three others who rate on a par with him in past performances.

Central, Eastern, Tech, Roosevelt, Episcopal, Hyattsville High, Gonzaga, Woodrow Wilson and Washington-Lee, with the first six named having relay teams, give the District area contenders in every one of the scholastic tests.

Al Hayden, of Central; Donald Gould, of Hyattsville; Bill Carr, of Washington-Lee, and Dave March, of Episcopal, are in the Schoolboy headliner, the scholastic 660, that has a field of seven.

Tom Deckard and Joe McCluskey, two Olympians, spice a great field in the 2-mile A. A. U. feature in which Graves, Georgetown freshman who won for the New York A. C. last year, will defend, and in which Maryland will be represented by Tommy Fields, Southern Conference champ.

Heats Start Early

Heats will be run off in the various events, starting at 6:30 and the finals will get under way at 8 o'clock. The Governor's mile will be run at 10:30, regardless of position on the program and the Georgetown-Maryland-North Carolina relay should ring down the curtain at 10:45 or thereabouts.

Fifteen colleges have entered representatives in the meet. They are American U., Catholic U., Fordham, Georgetown, Hopkins, Loyola, Baltimore U., Washington, Maryland, Navy, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Washington and Lee, North Carolina and Richmond.

Among the 1939 champions returning this year are George Kroupa, of Pennsylvania, holder of the record :07.2 for the 70-yard sprint; Frank Fuller, of Virginia, who won the high hurdles in 0:08.6; Alan Miller, of Maryland, who copped the 440 in 0:51.3, and Howard Jensen, Penn A. C., high jumping and vaulting star.

Maryland U. Boxers Face N. C. Tonight

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chapel Hill, N. C., Feb. 8.—Led by a pair of conference champions, Maryland and North Carolina, the top-ranking baxing teams in the Southern Conference, will clash here Friday night at 8 o'clock in Woollen Gymnasium in the No. 1 dual attraction in this section this season.

Boasting speedy, fast-unching teams, the Tarheels and Terrapins will be starting right where they left off in the 1939 conference eournament, when the Old Liners eked out a one-point decision, 15-14, over Coach Mike Ronman's charges.

Indications are that eight-bout programs will abount with thrills and keen competition with the feature bouts expected in the 135, 145, and 165-pound matches.

Boxing in the 1355-pound division will be North Carolina's colorful Andy Gennett and Maryland's crafty Nathan Askin. Recovered from a three-week siege of flu, Gennett made an auspicious debut last week by winning handily from Joe Obrochta, of Virginia Tech. He has looked even better in drills this week and appears ready for his toughest assignment of the season Friday. A skilled boxer, Askin outclassed Virginia's Peter Coy, highly touted sophomore last week. This bout should be one of the fastest of the evening.

Ed Dickerson, of the Tarheels, runs up against another rugged foe in the person of Sophomore Izzy Alperstein, a brother of Bonny Alperstein, the Terps' national collegiate champion in 1937 and 1938. This 145-pound bout promises a thrill-a-minute between two men who rely almost entirely on their boxing merits.

The 165-pound feature pits Maryland Newton Cox, Southern Conference champion, against Eldon (Red) Sanders, whom the Terp titleholder beat in the finals of the 1939 tourney. Much improved over last year, Sanders is at his peak for the champion.

Cunningham And Fenske in Pennac Mile

Kansas Star Seeks Victory After 4 Losses In Meet Tomorrow

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 8.—Glenn Cunningham, the once unbeatable Kansas miler whose last four major starts have ended in defeat, makes another bid for the elusive victory tomorrow night as defending champion in the Pennac mile, feature of the third annual Penn A. C. indoor meet.

Glenn has plenty of incentive to win the Pennac mile. His rivals will include Chuck Fenske, the Wisconsin ace who has twice whipped the durable Kansan this year, and a victory not only would avenge those defeats but would go a long ways toward establishing his indoor mile supremacy.

Believes He's Ready

Slow in rounding into top form, Cunningham believes he hit his stride in last Saturday's epic mile at the Millrose games. He finished only three-tenths of a second behind Fenske in that race and, in the opinion of Lawson Robertson, Pennsylvania coach who is directing the Penn A. C. meet, might have caught Fenske had he "opened up just a bit sooner."

Another rival tomorrow night will be Blaine Rideout, the North Texas teacher whose blistering early pace in the Millrose race helped Fenske run the second fastest indoor mile in history. Luigi Beccali, former Olympic champion; Carmen Bova, of Seton Hall, and Mason Chronester, of Maryland, are other starters in a field that Robertson predicts will cut several seconds off Cunningham's meet record of 4:15.6, set last year.

Track Is Slower

There's little likelihood, however, of equalling Fenske's Millrose time. The board track at Convention Hall, scene of the meet, has 12 laps and is slower than the 11-lap circle at Madison Square Garden.

Cunningham also trailed Fenske in a 4:10.3 mile and Gene Venzke in a 4:13.1 mile at Boston and lost to Archie San Romani in the New Orleans Sugar Bowl 1,500 meter race this year.

Betty Jameson Loses In Florida Golf Play

Women's National Champion Eliminated by Miss Hicks in 5-Extra-Hole Match; Grace Amory Defeats Jean Bauer, Defending Titlist

By the Associated Press

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 8.—Two favorites were eliminated today from the Palm Beach Women's Golf Tournament, making way for a finals match between Grace Amory, of Palm Beach, and Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif.

It took a heart-breaking, five-extra-hole match to put the National women's champion, Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., out of the running, at the hands of Miss Hicks.

The defending titlist, Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., fell easy prey, 3 and 1, to Miss Amory after failing in a defending last-nine rally.

Miss Jameson and Miss Hicks fought it out in a rare overtime competition before a bad second shot to a sand trap on the twenty-third hole put the National champion in trouble from which she could not recover.

It was a similar shot that cost her the Miami Biltmore victory last week against Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, on the second extra hole of the finals.

G. U. Prep Ties Landon at Soccer

Soccer teams representing Georgetown Prep and Landon Prep battled through yesterday's Private School League game to a scoreless tie. The rivals battled in a sea of mud. The G. U. boys had the better of the first half while Landon kept its foe on the defensive virtually throughout the second half.

Friends has won the only game decided thus far in the league, the other four having resulted in ties.

Md. Freshmen Trounce Devitt Five, 41-19

Dick Floyd Leads Attack for Winners; Kemp Best for Losers

The University of Maryland's freshman basketball team had little more than a workout at College Park yesterday, downing a weak Devitt Prep outfit from Washington, 41-19.

Wichita, Kans., Feb. 8 (AP).—The Wichita club of the American Hockey Association was purchased today from Mrs. Ella B. Wible by a group of Wichita businessmen.

American U. Easily Downs Delaware U.

Coach Staff Cassell had a birthday yesterday, and his American University basketball squad celebrated it with a 55-42 victory over the University of Delaware in a game which had everything but a floor show to amuse the spectators.

Red Skelton, film and stage comedian, started things when he threw out the first ball, appropriated 12 minutes for a bit of college humor and then presented Cassell with a gift from the student body.

The basketball teams took over at this point, and Cassell continued in the lighter vein by apparently trying to send in a man for each of his years—31—but he ran out in the first half after 12 players had gone in and out of the game with such rapidity that the Delaware lads hardly had a chance to find out whom they were supposed to cover.

American Best

Even so, they wouldn't have had a chance, for Cassell's men were hot on the trail of their third victory in five games and worked with an ease that left t he outcome in no doubt from the first.

Carl Byham, 6-foot-3 sophomore guard, was all over the floor for the Eagles and combined a great defensive game with a high-scoring performance that accounted for 17 points. Dutch Schulze, veteran guard, turned in one of the best passing performances seen on a local court all year and was a continual thorn in the Delaware boys' attack.

The Eagles pulled away to a 28-12 lead late in the first half and then began coasting with substitutes as Delaware's Coach Steve Arenda almost went berserk screaming instructions from the bench. Delaware began to close in and cut the lead down to a 28-21 at half-time. Barty Norford paced the Eagles' second half march, and the visitors could never get any closer than 10 points to Cassell's squad.

11 High School Fives to See Action Today

Roosevelt, Wilson Top Program in Twin Bill Tonight at Tech Gym

A pair of teams with their backs against the wall as far as berths in the interhigh cage round robin are concerned, and two more with nothing to gain but a psychological edge, feature tonight's double bill at Tech gym starting at 7:30.

Eastern and Tech, the opening foes, square off with the realization that a loss practical'y ends their hopes of getting in the championship tournament at the end of this month. It would be the third loss for the Tide, the defending champion, and Tech's fourth.

Roosevelt's meeting with Woodrow Wilson in the finale is expected to be a preview of the final game in the crucial tourney. The Riders are out ahead now with five victories and no losses, and though Wilson has only three victories to its credit, it too has no losses.

Eastern Favored

Eastern's eventual triumph over the Mighty Midgets of Tech is anticipated, though the Manual Trainers Wednesday took an overtime decision from St. John's, the team which beat Gonzaga, which in turn beat Eastern. Both clubs are finally in the groove, and almost anything could happen.

The outcome of the headline attraction is even more in doubt. Roosevelt, of course, deserves the call in view of its five straight triumphs. There are those, however, who insist the President's zone defense will cut down Roosevelt's scoring stars to less than six points each. Against the threats of Ernie Travis, Hymie Perlo and George West the Wilsonites can throw several artists of their own, including Bart Fugler, Moke MacDonald and Roy Cowdrey.

9 Games Listed

Whatever the outcome, neither team is expected to have much trouble landing a place in the final tournament. The game should be one of the best displays of honest-to-goodness basketball of the year.

Nine other battles promise to equal or steal the show from tonight's public school action. Best of these will probably be St. John's meeting with Bethesda tonight on the latter's court, or Gonzaga's clash with Western at the Raider gym in the afternoon.

Georgetown Prep comes to town for its first engagement with a public school quint, meeting Central at 3:30, at the same time that St. Andrews faces Landon, Sherwood meets Rockville, and Maryland Park meets Mount Rainier. All games are on the court of the last-mentioned.

Friends School travels to Mooretown, N. J., to engage the Friends School of that city, Anacostia's Indians meet the American University Frosh in a preliminary to the Eagles-Delaware clash at A. U., and Charlotte Hall is guest of Blair in a night clash.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 8.—The pedestal on which Joe Louis sits today is figuratively so tall that his dandruff is all flat from being pressed against the sky. He has become a superman again. After a brief interlude during which time he was just a good puncher with a first gear mind and a wedgewood jaw. Now, once again, he is in the supernatural class and the only doubt about his fights is a kind of suspense over whether his opponents can come up for the second round.

CONSIDINE

And yet that towering pedestal on which the bomber squats is made of material so flimsy that one punch could crumple it. Louis the magnificent may well be Louis the bum late tomorrow night. One punch from the floor by Arturo Godoy might change the paeons of praise we hear today into the jeers that someday will inevitably greet him.

The chasm between a ring great and a ring bum is narrow. Let Mr. Louis be deposited on his hams tomorrow night and we (and I mean all of us who have for just reasons built a thick aura of invulnerability around him) will say he never was anything more than a slow-witted loogan who won his reputation against grosser bums.

That may be only human, but if Louis wades into Godoy and chills the Chilean for the first time in Arturo's life, his pedestal will grow taller. He will have done a fine thing—knocked out the man who twice beat Galento. But if he loses he won't be losing the conqueror of Galento. He'll be losing to a slow, muscle-bound guy who blew a decision to one Euduardo Primo just before he came here to fight for the title.

Different rules seem to apply to heavyweight champions than to any other leaders in sport. Every time he pulls on those tight leather pillows he risks his prestige, his earning power and takes a chance on stopping, with his chin, some of the blizzard of leather the other (and usually keener) guy is throwing at him. We're tolerant with other champs. Byron Nelson can get knocked out from time to time, and so can Riggs and the others. Joe DiMaggio, hailed by all of ous as a wonder hitter, failed to connect 62 per cent of the time last season when he led both leagues. A heavyweight champ has to bat 1.000 or lose face. If he drops to .900, he's a tramp, and most of the things that made him a .900 hitter are forgotten. The immortal skill that is hailed on Friday can be called drab and mortal on Saturday.

If Louis wins—(as he should after a rough and tumble brawl that may go seven or eight rounds)—who is left for him to fight. A bald gent named Johnny Pacek, renamed Paycheck by his self-effacing manager, Harold Steinman, seems to be on the nomination list. Other nominees are not much more reputable. Some day a fellow is going to mosey along and knock him flatter than an ink spot, but that fellow is probably shooting marbles today, waiting to grow up.

The Louis-Godoy set-to could be a reissue of the Louis-Galento thing, in its rough, mauling, stepping-on-feet and butting ways. But Godoy can't punch like Galento. If Louis hits the canvas tomorrow night it will only be because some knave pulls his stool from under him.

Jacobs Lets Garcia Meet Armstrong

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Promoter Mike Jacobs today gave Ceferino Garcia, middleweight champion, and Henry Armstrong, welterweight king, permission to meet in a ten-round fight at Los Angeles, February 22.

Jacobs previously had threatened to go to court, if necessary, to prevent the bout since both fighters are under contract to do their fighting for him. Jacobs' release is expected to pave the way for a title fight in Madison Square Garden, March 29, between Garcia and Ken Overlin, of Richmond, Va.

Crepe, Odds-on Favorite, Wins in Hialeah Feature Event

Sprint Run Over Heavy, Holding Oval

Bucking Is Second By Nose; Third to Sassy Lady; Crowd Confused by Result

By the Associated Press

Hileah Park, Fla., Feb. 8.—B. F. Whitaker's Crepe, which recently returned to the races after about a year's absence and finished third, today showed the natural improvement anticipated and survived a bitter finish to win the Royal Palm Purse, 6-furlong, grade "C" dash for 4-year-olds and upward. The Omar Khayyam 5-year-old carried the successful Texas-owned silks first home by a half length with Ronnie Nash on his back. The chestnut veteran was an odds-on choice in the field of six, returning $3.70 for two.

Joseph E. Widener's Bucking, a trailer most of the way, rallied just in time to nose out W. J. McCune's Sassy Lady for the place.

The track, covered with water the previous day as a result of heavy rains, today was heavy, deep and holding. Crepe finished in 1:14 flat.

Those who took the short odds on Crepe had some anxious moments before their selection stuck his head out in front. Floragina, Paddy and Sassy Lady all had the choice topped in the first quarter mile. Crepe passed Paddy in another 2 furlongs, then began a stretch drive that saw four horses all holding a winning chance. Floragina weakened inside the last furlong. Crepe worked his way to the front in the last sixteenth and gamely staved off Bucking's belated challenge.

There was considerable confusion following the blanket finish of the fourth race, a 6-furlong dash for platers. Four horses were spread across the track virtually on a line. The numbers were flashed, showing Takeitfrome first. Free Bid second, Baltee third, and Play House fourth. Then followed a long delay. The numbers finally disappeared and many wondered if there had been a disqualification, although the "objection" sign had not been shown.

New numbers went up, with a change in the first two. Free Bid was placed first and Takeitfrome second. Word was sent to the press box that the placing judges, instead of waiting for the photo of the finish, had gone ahead and flashed a result, which later was changed. During the period before the change was made, it could have been possible for those holding straight tickets on Free Bid to tear them up or discard them, without waiting for the gold ball on the "tote" board in the infield to rise and signify that the result was official.

Takeitfrome, a long shot, finished on the inside, while Free Bid was on the outside of the bunched quartet. Takeitfrome appeared the winner to the chart callers. Free Bid returned $14.40.

Jehoover, saddled by Hirsch Jacobs, scored one of the easiest triumphs of the winter when he took the third purse by eight lengths to pay $16.90. This 3-year-old colt, entered for $1,750, had started only once before. That was at Aqueduct last September, and on that occasion the Halcyon colt raced with a claiming tag of $4,000, finishing far back.

Arched and Kleig Light had Jehoover headed for a half mile of the 6-furlong test. Then Jehoover bounded into a wide lead and merely toyed with his opposition. Arched beat Kleig Light by a half length.

JEHOOVER, away forwardly, followed the pace closely under light restraint the first half mile, assumed command with a rush and opened up a commanding lead to win in hand. ARCHED gradually bettered his position on the outside and wore KLEIG LIGHT down. The latter, well up all the way, faltered in the stretch run. TOTACHE, hard ridden, finished stoutly on the extreme outside. NOODLES was never a serious threat.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CREPE, $3.70, $3.00, $2.50; BUCKING, $5.00, $3.20; SASSY LADY, $4.60.

CREPE swung to the outside of the leaders entering the stretch, gained steadily when placed to punishment and outlasted his opposition when the real test came. BUCKING, outrun the first half mile, made up much ground after entering the stretch and finished fairly well at all. SASSY LADY, a keen contender from the start, took command through the stretch, but faltered right at the end. GHOST QUEEN moved up stoutly at the furlong pole, but hung in the final drive.

ARGONNE WOODS, prominent contender all the way, closed with determination through the stretch when placed to punishment and shook off CANTATA in the final 50 yards. CANTATA slipped through on the inside rounding the lower turn, came around SCYLLA entering the stretch, took command, but was not equal to the winner in the final drive. SCYLLA, used up racing HARD WAY into defeat, faltered in the stretch when others safe. BEAUTY FLAG closed a big gap from a slow beginning. DAHOMEY made up ground nearing the finish.

DOWN UNDER, under steadying restraint until midway around the lower turn, moved to the front with a rush and opened up a commanding lead, but was kept under brisk pressure to the end. HOLTON, rated off the pace, began to better his position in the last 3 furlongs while saving ground and wore YOUR BUDDY down in the final drive.

Revised Eagles' Line to Face Orioles

Cairns Out; Lahti Plays At Forward

Coach Redvers Seeks More Punch; Second Place Is Objective; Omer Kelly Plays

A revised forward line will be introduced by the Washington Eagles tonight when they meet the second place Baltimore Orioles in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League match at Riverside Stadium at 8:30 o'clock.

Coach Redvers Maskenzie yesterday announced that Bill Lahti, a player who has had little action this season, will be started at right wing tonight in the line otherwise comprised of Ken Partist, center, and Alan Foster, left wing.

Regrets Action

"I regret the necessity of this action because Cairns has played some fine hockey for me in the past," Mackenzie admitted yesterday, "but under existing circumstances I feel it to be to the best interests of the team to use Lahti.

"While Lahti lacks Cairns' experience he is a cooperative and hard-working kid who has been fighting hard for this chance. I intend giving him every chance of qualifying for a regular job."

Cairns was a member of the Partis-Cairns-Foster combination that was ranked among the Eastern League's finest last seson, and it has been Cairns' inability to click up to the anticipated standard this season, Mackenzie feels, that has resulted in the general slump experienced by this line.

The Orioles, easy prey for the Eagles in early season, have turned on the locals in recent matches and are now in second place by a six-point margin. The Orioles administered the Eagles their worst defeat of the season in Baltimore last month, 10 to 2, and dealt them a 4-to-0 whitewashing in the Oriole rink last Sunday night.

Kelley Is Star

The Orioles tonight will introduce the shutout king of the Eastern League in 20-year-old Amer Kelly. Kelly was credited with his sixth shutout of the season last Wednesday night as the Orioles blanked River Vale, 3 to 0, and is considered one of the finest professional prospects in the Eastern League.

Three Eagle players tonigh must watch their respective steps when Paul Courteau, Bill Davies and John McTeer take the ice. Each has been charged with a major and misconduct penalty and a serious infraction of the rules just now would result in their temporary suspension.

The Eagles tomorrow night meet Atlantic City's Sea Gulls in Atlantic City;; the Sea Gulls face the Eagles at Riverside Sunday night at 8:30, and the New York Rovers return here to oppose the Eagles next Tuesday night.

V. M. I., V. P. I. Renew Cage Rivalry Today

Record Crowd to See Game Ushering in Week-End of Athletics

Special Dispatch to The Post

Blacksburg, Va., Feb. 8.—Athletic officials at Virginia Tech anticipate the largest basketball turnout of the season here tomorrow for the double-header with Tech's old rival, V. M. I. Athletic Director Monk Younger expects a near-capacity crowd.

The rival freshman quintets will start the fireworks at 7. The varsities will begin scrapping in true Tech-V. M. I. fashion at 8 or a few minutes thereafter. Varsity and first year floormen of the two institutions will meet again at Lexington in a return engagement, February 20.

A swimming meet with Duke here Friday at 4 p. m. ushers in a heavy week-end for Gobbler teams. Three Saturday contests will send the varsity and freshman wrestlers against V. M. I. at Lexington and the varsity boxers against Presbyterian College here at 8:30.

The ring encounter with Presbyterian was slated to begin at 8 but was moved back to 8:30 in order that faculty members attending a 7:30 dinner dance at the Faculty Center may also witness the bouts.

Coach Tom Slusser has not picked his entry in three of the weight divisions. Howard Graninger, veteran from Arlington, who has not fought this season, may get the call over Joe O'Brochta in the 135-pound class. Either Garrett Taylor or Jimmy Woolwine will box at 155 pounds and either Hamad Smile or Kent Belmore, a sophomore who was kept out of the North Carolina meet by illness, will box in the 165-pound event.

Andy Glass is the choice at 120, Wally Alexson at 127, Jimmy Evans at 145, John Sowder at 175 and Woodrow Gosney in the heavyweight division. Glass showed class in losing by the narrowest of margins to Carolina's conference champ, Billy Winstead, last week.

Presbyterian has a capable array that proved its mettle by tying Georgia's slugging Bulldogs in a recent thriller.

U. of Va. Teams Set for Exodus Saturday

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 8.—University of Virginia varsity and freshman teams join in a general exodus this week-end for major competition on "foreign" grounds.

Backed by two victories and a tie, the Cavalier boxers ended heavy work today for their middle-of-the-schedule meet with Navy at Annapolis Saturday night, which will be the tenth renewal of that ring classic. Freshman boxers will accompany the Virginia delegation to figure in an afternoon clash with the Navy plebes.

Dividing student and alumni interest, however, will be Saturday's basketball feature at Lynchburg, where the polished Cavalier court squad will venture in quest of a State championship against Washington and Lee. Virginia's crack freshman team will make that a double-header event, also, by meeting the Washington and Lee freshmen in a preliminary immediate to varsity action.

The bulk of the track squad is entered in the Maryland- Fifth Regiment games at Baltimore Saturday night, with likely point winners including Frank Fuller, Bill Marbury and Tomm Todd, hurdlers; Bobby Preston, pole vault; Lee McLaughlin, shotput, and Bill Perry, high jump.

Also on tour are Virginia's varsity swimmers, who meet Rutgers tomorrow at New Brunswick and have a Saturday engagement with Rider College at Trenton.

Coming up to the Navy meet undefeated in their individual bouts to date are Joe Block, 120 pounds; Truman Southall, 155 pounds; Fenton Somerville, 165 pounds, and Kenneth Rathbun, 175 pounds, the winners in last week's 4-to-4 tie with Maryland.

Arthur Lip Kint, sophomore 127-pounder, forced out of the Maryland meet by an injury, is slated to return to the line-up, along with the other regulars, Peter Coy, 135 pounds; Dick Williams, 145 pounds, and Edward Burgess, heavyweight.

Browns Acquire Auker, Red Sox Pitcher, for Cash

Boston, Feb. 8 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox announced the outright sale tonight of Elden Auker, right-handed pitcher, to the St. Louis Browns for an undisclosed amount of cash.

Auker, chiefly famed for his submarine delivery, came to the Sox last season in a trade with Detroit. He won nine games and lost ten for Boston in 1939.

The Sox management also announced receipt of the signed contract of Jim Bagby, jr., another righthanded hurler. Bagby, a sensational freshman, ran into the second-year jinx last season and was sent down to Little Rock, returning to Boston in September. He broke even on his Boston record last year, winning five and losing the same number.

Shrwood Routs Clarksville, 65-13

With Pflucker and C. Link playing a tune on the basket, Sherwood routed Clarksville yesterday, 65-13. Pflucker scored 20 points and his teammate accounted for 18. Beale and LeComtle turned in 4 points each for the vanquished.

Bethlehem Five Defeats Navy B Squad

Middies Bow, 41-40, On Foul Shot; Miss Chance to Tie Score

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 8.—With the Bethlehem Accountants, leaders of the Baltimore Basketball League on the winning side, the Navy B. squad five lost its first game this season here this afternoon, 41 to 40.

Trailing, 40 to 31, five minutes from the end, Welch, Bothe and Blair led in an assault which knotted the score at 40 to 40 a minute from the final whistle.

Uvanni, of the visitors, was awarded two tries from the line, and scored from the first, electing to put the ball in play from the side instead of his second shot. Navy recovered the ball, and Welch one of the Navy's heavy scorers, got a chance to tie the score from the line with 15 seconds to go, but missed.

The visitors had an edge on general team play and shooting accuracy, which the Navy nearly made up with its speed and aggressiveness.

3 Considered as Montreal Manager

Montreal, Feb. 8 (AP).—President Hector Racine of the Montreal Royals disclosed today—"Bill Killefer, Clyde Sukeforth and Rogers Hornsby all are definitely in the running for the manager's job. We expect to choose one of them by Monday, when an announcement will be made."

Sukeforth, former Major League catcher, piloted Elmira, N. Y., in the Eastern League last season; Killefer was coach of Brooklyn Dodgers of the National League while Hornsby managed Baltimore in the International.

Racine said President Larry MacPhail of the Dodgers possibly might be here Monday to continue discussions of the proposed deal whereby Brooklyn would purchase stock in the Royals.

Little Rulers Have Brief Reign

Junior king and queen for one day at the festive Mardi Gras in Galveston, Tex., were Shearn Moody, jr., 6, and Joan Marie Ragsdale, 8, shown in white satin, pearl-studded costumes. The young king is the grandson of W. L. Moody, a Galveston pioneer; the fair queen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Silas B. Ragsdale

Bill Ackerman

—On Fishing

Fishing docks, regardless of their location, are always a focal point of visitors as the boats come in with their catches. Pier 5 in Miami, without any doubt, is tops as far as sightseers are concerned and just this week a woman leaned over the rail and, pointing to a very large and evident sailfish on the stern of Capt. Bill Hatch's Patsy, asked, "Say, mister, what kind of a fish is that there?"

ACKERMAN

Capt. Bill, who was cutting baits for the next day, muttered, "Sailfish, lady," but it evidently didn't register for again, "S-ay, what kind of a fish is that there?"

Bill dropped his knife, looked up and bellowed, "That there is a sailfish, lady!" and went back to his cutting baits, while the woman hurriedly passed on to another boat.

What she couldn't know was that Bill is supposed to have caught the first sailfish, way back in 1912; that he has probably caught more than any other man in the world, for he has fished not only all the seas on top of the world but those down underneath as well, and that cutting baits isn't just a part of a well-loved job but a most important preparation.

He leaves very shortly with Mike and Mrs. Lerner for a try at the big blue marlin on the South American coast before coming north to captain Paul Townsend's Jacpau III during the white marlin season off Ocean City.

Ab Roe is back from a bass-fishing jaunt down Sarasota way. We imagine, not having heard from him, that he found the streams frozen over.

T. O. Nichols, fishing nearly the same waters, should have better going—certainly more comfortable. He expects to go on down in the Keys for bonefish and a try at the tarpon and permit in the Marquesas.

Joe Moss (this is his third trip this winter) passed through with his missus for one more try at the big fellows. She is leading in the crevalle division of the Miami tournament. S. D. Hecht flew Eastern down. Maine all summer—palms in the winter. If you can beat that? we don't know how.

The season is on at Cat Cay. Lloyd McNeil is over with a fine new cruiser, Bounce Anderson is there with his Jersey Lightning, and Walter Clay with his Horse Conch, the guide for Mary Sears last spring when she boated the world reeord blue marlin. J. Lakin Baldridge, member of the tuna team, flew over from Dinner Key to try the going from his cruiser Gunner.

Frank (Tycoon) O'Brien is back from Bimini with a story of fighting a big "blue" on 9-thread from 5 o'clock in the evening until 7. The last hour of the fight was waged with the aid of the searchlight and, just as the fish was belly up to the boat and Frank was visualizing a new Rod and Reel Club record, a small fish cut the line and the beaten fish sank from sight.

Not nearly so tough as the angler who fished Bimini at the same time, but for the first time in his life. He had a blow on, only to have the hook pull out after more than an hour. Lost in the same way a couple of sizable white marlin, and returning to this side of the Stream, continued his awful streak of ill luck by losing two sails before finally boating two on his last day. More than satisfied with what he did catch, for someone had told him many anglers fish for years, when the breaks are against them, before they finally connect.

'Baering Down'

Tom Dewey and Jim Farley have stolen a March of Time on the other Presidential shadow-boxers. Both of them see mio have agreed not to mention the subject.

The politicians hand out territory like the old beer mobs. The day is gone when Lincoln and Douglas worked the same side of the street.

Louis Defends Title for 9th Time

Summit, N. J.—for the last time tonight. They break camp tomorrow morning and will be in the Garden at noon for the weigh-in ceremonies.

There was a possibility that Louis might be heavier than he has ever been. When he wound up his boxing work yesterday, he scaled 204 pounds and was not expected to take off any of that before he turns up for the official poundage-taking. He weighed an even 200 for Pastor and 200¾ for Galento in his most recent starts. Godoy figures to scale between 202 and 203.

Tucker Fights

So certain were all concerned that Deadpan Joe would finish on top tomorrow that Promoter Mike Jacobs even has announced his next opponent—or "victim." This will be Johnny Paychek, the scant-haired Wes Moines hopeful, and the fight probably will be held in the Garden April 3 for the benefit of the Finnish Relief Fund.

The fight will be broadcast in both English and Spanish (for South America). The NBC Blue Network will be doing it for the United States. Five heavyweight preliminary bouts have been lined up for the show, topped by an eight-rounder between Buddy Scott, of Dallas, and Tommy Tucker, of New York. The other four are six-round affairs.

Chrysler Votes $1.25 Dividend $1 a Year Ago

1939 Net $8.47 a Share Against $4.32 in The Previous Year

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 8.—Directors of Chrysler Corporation today declared a dividend of $1.25 a share on the capitol stock. At this time last year a dividend of $1 a share was paid while total 1939 payments were $5 a share. The dividend is payable March 13 to stock of record February 19.

The corporation reported for 1939 net profit of $36,879,829, or $8.47 a share, compared with $18,798,294, or $4.32 a share, in 1938.

Earnings in the final quarter of 1939 were indicated to be $5,476,711, equal to $1.25 a share, compared with $12,126,416, or $2.79 a share in the final quarter of 1938.

The sharp falling off in final quarter earnings, financial circles pointed out, was attributable to a considerable extent to the strike at the company's plants in October and November, last year, which resulted in a virtual stoppage of operations.

Idle Funds Drop $40,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that lendable excess reserves of banks declined $40,000,000 to $5,520,000,000 in the week ended February 7.

The decline was due mostly to a temporary increase in money in circulation and Treasury tax collections.

May Wheat Again Nears Dollar Mark

Cash Sales Made at $1.01¾ a Bushel In Spot Market

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 8.—An advance of 2 cents a bushel today carried wheat prices to their highest level in two weeks, May contracts closing within ⅛ of the dollar-a-bushel mark. No. 2 mixed wheat sold for $1.01¾ in the spot market.

Buying inspired by a forecast of much colder weather over most of the grain belt, giving rise to fear of possible crop damage due to freezing and thawing, apparently was the most important factor in the upturn. Rising prices brought numerous previous "short" sellers into the pit to cover their commitments and this speeded the upturn.

An added factor was evidence of accelerated European purchases of farm commodities, including Canadian wheat and other grains and some United States lard. There were various reports of United States wheat and flour sales for export from Atlantic and Gulf ports but Government officials denied that the subsidy program for these operations had been reinstated.

After an early fractional decline, wheat rose 1⅝-2⅛ from the lows and closed 1½-1⅞ higher than yesterday, May 99¾-99⅞, July 97-97⅛. Corn finished ½-¾ up, May, 56⅝-56¾; July 56⅝; oats 1 higher; rye, 1½-1¾ up and lard, 13-15 higher.

Profit-Takin Wipes Out Rise Of Cotton Prices

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Cotton futures bumped into profit-taking and speculative selling after a late shift ahead today. An erratic session closed 4 points lower to 5 higher.

Liquidation in the March delivery by leading spot interests put the market at a disadvantage most of the day. Traders estimated that nearly 50,000 bales of the spot month have been sold in the past week.

Offsetting this pressure was moderate support from Bombay and Liverpool at the start. The Far East, however, offered several thousand bales of December, which carried that month back about 6 points

Low prices were canceled late in the day when trade accounts got behind the market and Wall Street interests covered. Strength of many allied markets and securities was accounted the main reason for the rally. Outside gains were again pared by renewed pressure.

Cottonseed Oil

The cottonseed oil futures market was cheered today by news Europe was in the market for further supplies of the staple. Prices rose 7 to 8 points, with September at one time within 2 points of the season's high.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 8.—Domestic rails advanced sharply today in the stock market following overnight announcement government payment plans to the carriers for war services. Despite profit-taking closing prices were near the best. Other divisions of the market lost early gains and ended with little variation. British government bonds never did get ahead and persistent pressure caused a sharp drop. Base metals tended lower, while industrials, kaffirs and oils moved idly.

Paris—Bourse prices slid downward after a firm start today. Bank shares, selected steels and utilities countered the main trend. Rentes closed 15 centimes higher to 70 lower, with the dollar guaranteed loan the firm spot.

Amsterdam—Domestic issues tended lower in the bourse while American shares moved uncertainly. Hints a forthcoming government loan might be forced on buyers created a hesitant atmosphere.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler

Advance Continues for Third Day; Buying Considered Mostly Technical; Low-Price Rail Bonds in Demand

New York, Feb. 8.—The rebound in the stock market continued today, thus making it three days in a row that the average has advanced. That is something of a record. We had such phenomenon last September, when the European war broke out, but since that time the market has proceeded on the principle that one day forward justified two days down.

The Street has not been entirely won over to the bullish side by the action of this week, encouraging as it may be. For the buying is regarded as largely of a technical nature, being brought about in large measure by short covering and other technical considerations after the long series of irregular declines.

The rise in the composite average today measured 0.62 point, which is the best of the week, and pleasing to the bullish forces was the fact that this gain was accompanied by more widespread trading. Turnover on the big board amounted to 867,820 shares. This was the most active trading since January 12 and the net gain in the average was the best since December 13.

Rally In Last Hour

Most active trading today came in the closing 15 minutes, and for the final hour the volume was 367,820 shares, compared with 500,000 for the first four hours, showing that the market gained as the day drew to a close. The rush at the close was sufficient to make the ticker six minutes late.

There was some disposition to buy speculative shares today on the assumption that Allied purchases of war materials in this country cannot be delayed much longer. There was one rumor that the British will build their own plants in this country in order to guarantee delivery of needed war materials. This appears most unlikely. On the other hand, firm orders from Great Britain or any other belligerent amount in effect to a subsidy for American plants which will guarantee their operation irrespective of domestic business.

Foreign Orders

Investors apparently expected a rush of such orders last September, and they were fooled, but the war news from day to day indicates that foreign purchases cannot be delayed much longer. Unquestionably this has played a part in the firming of the stock market in the last few days, and it has offset the definite statistical evidence of a declining trend in domestic affairs.

Favorable news was supplied today in the General Motors report for January. The weekly carloading report also was on the favorable side.

The report on General Motors contributed to support for this issue in today's trading. In fact, it was noted that today's market was featured by activity in some of the older line favorites instead of in the so-called cats and dogs which have monopolized the ticker lately. Motors was up ⅞ point. Chrysler was not as active, but it jumped 3⅛ points.

Bond Market Firm

Firm conditions prevailed today in most sections of the listed bond market. Activity increased on greater speculative buying, the turnover amounting to $7,380,000. Low priced domestic railroad and other issues were in heaviest demand. Foreign dollar securities were irregular.

Best grade investments were sidetracked not only because of the interest in speculative bonds, but also because the new issue of $25,000,000 Dayton Power & Light securities was available. Institutional investors took substantial portions of the new flotation.

Scandinavian obligations remained firm, while Belgian and Italian issues attracted a little attention. German issues were dull, but Canadians and Australians did well. Brazilians were favorites in a dull Latin-American department.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Eugene Northrop bid an unmarkable game, but duped his opponents into letting him make it by means of a false discard.

In establishing a discard he threw a card of a suit in which he was well protected, hoping the opponents would lead that suit and steer clear of the one in which he actually held losers. The opponents fell for the bait, and Northrop ran home with the contract. His partner was John M. Naylor.

West opened with the deuce of clubs, and East took with his king. The ace of clubs came next, Northrop ruffing. Northrop saw that he had to lose two diamonds and—from East's double—a trump, in addition to the club already lost. The only chance to make the hand was to get over a dummy, lead the jack of clubs, discard a diamond and let the adversaries win, and later discard the other diamond on the established ten of clubs. The only trouble was that the defense would surely cash a second diamond trick before Northrop had the discard established.

After a little consideration, declarer saw a way out. He crossed to the king of hearts and returned the jack of clubs, discarding the four of spades. West won and returned a spade to prevent South from discarding another loser in the suit.

This was the chance Northrop needed. He won the ace of spades, cashed ace of trumps, overtook spade queen with dummy's king and discarded his losing diamonds on the spade jack and club ten. He lost two clubs and one trump—much better than losing one club, one trump and two diamonds.

with Slocum

There's an interesting little experiment in rejuvenation going on in New York and Chicago centers of the great radio script show industry. The script show is the faintly technical name for those morning and afternoon serials that clutter up every station in the country from about 10 a. m. to late afternoon.

ZASU PITTS

There are some very good, and some very bad, script shows around, and nobody knows that any better than the folks who sponsor and produce the little gems. The boys are doing everything they can to improve their product and this new experiment mentioned above concerns the introduction of big movie names into the casts of the shows.

The latest is Zazu Pitts, who joins the "Big Sister" show next Monday over WJSV at 11:30, which means that "Big Sister" has one steady listener beginning Monday which it never had before. Zasu will drift into the story as "Miss Wayne," a wistful, small town spinster, which means Zasu will get a chance to do the indescribable things she does so well on the screen.

Zasu is the latest of the movie greats to get into the daytime serial business, and begging her predecessors pardon, it is to be hoped she has better luck than her said predecessors.

The big names have been slightly on the dull side, because, believe it or not, it's tougher being a good radio actress than it is being a good stage or screen actress. Reason: On the stage and screen an actress can take advantage of such trivia as mugging, motion, facial expression, dress, and many other things. Your radio thespian is left alone with his script and his vocal chords.

Alice Frost, who plays the "Big Sister" lead, is one of the great radio actresses. She works a lot and gets paid beautifully for it. There are several others of her ilk—Arlene Francis, Agnes Moorhead, Martin Gabel and others.

THE DRAGON'S TEETH
By ELLERY QUEEN

Chapter 27

"NO DOUBT about it," snapped the Inspector. "Except for that fringe of gray on his skull, it's the same man. I guess your game's up, Cole!"

"I'm not Cole!" screamed the man. "I'm Edmund De Carlos! I can furnish a hundred proofs I'm Edmund De Carlos!"

"Yeah?" drawled Beau. He waved at Ellery. "I now retire in favor of my eminent colleague, that noted orator, Mr. Ellery Queen."

Mr. Queen stepped forward. "We've proved you're Cole in three ways," he said to the bald man. "By your possession of Cole's identified fountain-pen, by our personal identification of you as the man who called on us three months ago, and —for legal evidence—by this candid-camera photograph.

"We're in a position to present a fourth proof so damning, Mr. Cole, you may pass judgment on it yourself."

"The name," spat the bald man, "is De Carlos!"

Mr. Queen shrugged and took a photostat from the desk. "This photostat shows the cancelled voucher of a check for $15,000 written out by Cadmus Cole in this office the afternoon he engaged our services. It's gone through the Clearing House, as you see.

"Now how can we be sure the signature on this check," he continued, "is genuinely that of Cadmus Cole? There are three ways to authenticate it. First, he wrote it out himself under the eyes of Mr. Rummell and me. Second, and much more conclusive, Cole's bank authenticated on demand, and later honored, the check exhibiting this signature. Third, we may compare the signature on this check with the signature on Cadmus Cole's will—the will-signature, incidentally, which was subjected to the most searching scrutiny by the Surrogate, who ultimately probated the will. Mr. Goossens, have you brought the photostat of the Cole will-signature, as I requested?"

"YES," said Mr. Queen with satisfaction, "the similarity even to a layman's eye is unmistakable. Will you satisfy yourselves?"

The district attorney and Inspector Queen compared the check-signature with the will-signature.

The inspector nodded, and Sampson said: "We'd have to have expert opinion, of course, but I admit they look identical."

"And in the face of the other evidence, we may take the assumption to be a fact. In other words, the man who wrote out this check in our office three months ago must have been Cadmus Cole. Do you agree?"

They nodded.

Mr. Queen laid down the Cole check-photostat and picked up two other photostats. "These are of a $25,000 check written out the other night, also in this office, also before our eyes, by this gentleman who has been calling himself Edmund De Carlos. I have the original in my possession; it has not been deposited for, at the moment, immaterial reasons." Mr. Queen handed one of the De Carlos-check photostats to the sunburnt man. "Do you deny the signature on this check to be yours?"

"I'm neither denying nor affirming," mumbled the man.

"No matter; Rummell and I will swear to it, and there must be hundreds of specimens of your handwriting extant since you took up residence in the Tarrytown estate of Cadmus Cole.

"Now, ladies and gentlemen," continued Mr. Queen, taking back the photostat, "there exists a strange and exhilarating kinship between the names Cadmus Cole and Edmund De Carlos. Purely a coincidence, of course, but it makes for an attractive little demonstration.

"Note that in the name 'Edmund De Carlos' we have every letter of the alphabet which occurs in the name 'Cadmus Cole' and which would be required in a reconstruction of the name 'Cadmus Cole!' Even, observe, to the capital or initial—C. This makes it possible for us to perform an educational experiment.

"I'm going to take these two photostats of the check written out by Mr. De Carlos, which contains his full signature in his own handwriting, and cut up the De Carlos signature into its components.

"Then I shall rearrange these and paste them down on another sheet of paper, in such an order that they will spell out the name 'Cadmus Cole.' In this way we'll have the name 'Cadmus Cole' written in Edmund De Carlos' handwriting."

With scissors and pastepot Mr. Queen went to work.

When he was finished he observed: We are now in a position to cap our little climax. Here is Cadmus Cole's authentic signature, taken from the cancelled check-voucher:

Cadmus Cole

Edmund De Carlos

Cadmus Cole

Compare all three, please."

And while they were examining his three exhibits, Mr. Queen added: "As a matter of fact, while this little demonstration piques, in a sense it was unnecessary. You had merely to compare De Carlos' signature on the Cole will—as witness—with Cole's signature—as testator—to see that they were written by the same hand. I've never seen the will before tonight, but I'm surprised you didn't notice the similarity, Mr. Goossens."

"I'm surprised myself," muttered Goossens, staring at the exhibits. "And I imagine the surrogate will be, too!"

The inspector straightened up. "That's enough for me. You're Cole, Mister, and there's no question about that."

District Attorney Sampson looked uneasy. "It certainly appears that way."

"Why did you pretend to be dead?" demanded the inspector of the silent man in the chair. "What happened to the real De Carlos? What's behind this masquerade, Cole? With the murder of Margo Cole's impostor hanging over your head, you've got some mighty tall explaining to do!"

The man in the chair looked about wildly. "But I'm not Cole!" he cried in his mumbly voice. "How many times do I have to tell you that?"

He thrust his false teeth back into his mouth and clapped his glasses on his eyes; and this seemed to give him new strength, for he bounded from the chair and began to dance up and down. "I'm Edmund De Carlos. Why, there's one man that's known me for years and years—he could prove in a second who I am, because he knew Cole well, too!"

"Angus, captain of Cole's yacht Argonaut! Just give me a little time, inspector, a little time to locate Capt. Angus! He'll tell you who I am. He'll—"

"What would you say," asked Beau jovially, "if I told you that your Capt. Angus is in the next room, waiting to identify you as Cole?"

The sunburnt man's mouth fell open.

"We've been looking for him," continued Beau crisply, "ever since you had yourself reported dead, Cole. One of our operatives finally located him. He'd retired from active service after you docked at Santiago de Cuba and, having no dependents, he decided to take a busman's holiday. He's been on a round-the-world cruise as a passenger. His ship docked in Frisco yesterday, my operative flew him here and—" said Beau as Ellery opened the reception-room door and beckoned—"here he is!"

A tall lean man, wearing a gray suit and carrying a topcoat and a fedora hat, marched in between the San Francisco detective and Sergt. Velie.

Capt. Angus was blackened from years of exposure to the ocean sun. His eyes under heavy black brows were a frosty blue-green, the color of icebergs just below that waterline; and he carried himself with an imperious assurance, as if he were accustomed to command and receive obedience.

He paused just inside the office and looked about.

"Capt. Angus?" said Beau cheerfully, stepping forward. "I'm Rummell; this is Ellery Queen, my partner; and those two worried-looking gentlemen over there are Inspector Queen, of the homicide squad, and District Attorney Sampson, of New York County."

The tall man nodded. "Quite a party," he observed dryly, in a resonant bass voice. "Is this all for me, Mr. Rummell?"

"Capt. Angus, I want to ask you just one question." Beau stepped aside and pointed at the medium-sized, sunburnt, bald-headed man in the center of the room. "Who is that man?"

Capt. Angus looked puzzled. He glanced from the bald man to the others and then back to the bald man. "I don't understand. Who should he be?"

BEAU CHOKED, spluttered. Then he cried: De Carlos? Look again! Isn't he Cadmus Cole?"

"Mr. Cole?" Capt. Angus threw back his head and guffawed. "I should say not! Mr. Cole is dead."

"Mr. Cole—is—dead?" repeated Mr. Ellery Queen, seeming to find difficulty with the English language.

"Of course! He died aboard the Argonaut three months ago. I fixed the shroud around his body with my own hands, sir—old-fashioned canvas, all shipshape, the way we used to do it in sail."

Beau roared: "It's a plant, a frame-up! He's been bribed to say that! You'd better tie the can on him, too, pop!"

"Just a moment." The tall man lost his geniality, and his tone of voice brought about a sudden silence. "Do I understand you to say I'm mixed up in something crooked, Mister?"

"You heard me," snarled Beau.

"Well, you're a loud-sounding pup," said the Captain softly, "and I'd like nothing better than to thrash you for that, but the fact is I can prove my statement, because I know where at least five members of the crew are, and they'll bear me out to a man. There wasn't anything funny about Mr. Cole's death—he died just as I reported it by radio to White Lady."

"Give it to him properly, Captain," said De Carlos in a vicious tone.

"Besides, this gentleman couldn't be Mr. Cole. Mr. Cole was a little taller than Mr. De Carlos, thinner, and his eyes were of a different color. Mr. De Carlos is nearsighted, has to wear glasses all the time; Mr. Cole had the best eyesight I ever knew a man of his age to have—right down to the end; never wore glasses in his life. He was completely bald; Mr. De Carlos has a fringe. He didn't have teeth, that's true, just as Mr. De Carlos hasn't; but then Mr. Cole never wore a plate—the inside of his mouth was sensitive, he used to say; couldn't stand the feeling of a plate at all. He was a vegetarian, anyway, and didn't need false teeth."

In the corner, forgotten, sat Kerrie; and over her face came an expression of hopelessness.

"And that isn't all," continued the captain, with a quiet satisfaction at the sight of Beau's consternation. "Mr. Cole had severe arthritis in both hands—arthritis deformans, I think it's called. Had it long as I knew him. He once told me he'd got it all of a sudden 'way back in '19 or '20, I don't remember which. Why, his hands were so badly crippled they hardly looked human! All knotted up and discolored. You'd spot 'em in a second. But look at Mr. De Carlos' hands; they're normal in shape and color. Mr. Cole couldn't so much as hold up a pair o' telescopic glasses with either hand. He couldn't even eat by himself, because he couldn't hold a knife or fork. The steward's assistant had to feed him, like a baby."

"Have you any proof, captain, that what you say is true?"

Capt. Angus smiled. He drew an envelope bulging with snapshots from his breast pocket and threw it on the desk. "I thought these might come in handy," he said. "I'm sort of a camera bug."

The district attorney seized the envelope and began to look through the photographs. There were dozens of them, large snapshots taken with a sharp, excellent lens.

In many De Carlos appeared beside another man, taller, thinner than De Carlos, completely bald, with twisted and crippled hands. All the photographs had been taken on shipboard, as the backgrounds indicated.

"That," said Capt. Angus with a sly look at Beau, "was Cadmus Cole."

Ellery grabbed the photographs. Beau took one look and then, the back of his neck furnace-red, stalked off to a corner . . . the corner opposite the one where Kerrie sat.

"That's enough for me," snapped the inspector. He made a sign to the detective and matron. Beau looked frightened—the first time Mr. Queen had ever seen such a look on his partner's face. His shoulders sagging, he averted his eyes.

Jennings Made No. 1 Citizen Of Capital

Cosmopolitan Club Awards Him Medal For Civic Service

Coleman Jennings, who retired as a banker in 1928 to devote his activities to public welfare, yesterday was awarded the Cosmopolitan Club's Distinguished Service Medal with the designation of Washington's outstanding citizen of 1939.

The award was made at a luncheon meeting of the club in the Carlton Hotel, in presence of several hundred citizens. Of Jennings' activities that brought him the recognition, Dr. J. Rozier Biggs, chairman of the Distinguished Service Medal committee, said:

"The man we are to honor today has given freely of his thought, time, ability and finances to bring relief to the underprivileged and to help them help themselves. As president of the Community Chest he has done yeoman work for which he received no compensation of a financial nature."

He has founded youth clubs, Dr. Biggs continued, in this city, throughout the country and even in England. "He has always been interested in youth and its problems which is probably why he travels from 20,000 to 25,000 miles a year, at his own expense, to address youth groups and forward the movement."

The interest of Jennings in those at the District workhouse at Occoquan and at the National Training School for Girls was mentioned.

"He brings rays of sunshine into their lives. He can well say, 'Yes, they are my friends,'" Dr. Biggs told the club.

Turning to Jennings, he declared: "Because of the numerous sacrifices of your thought, time and finances; because of your unselfish efforts to benefit the people of Washington by founding youth clubs; because of your excellent work as president of the Community Chest, and because of your many anonymous charities, the Cosmopolitan Club designates you as the citizen of Washington who performed the most outstanding unselfish service for the City of Washington in 1939."

Jennings said he was unworthy of the honor, "but profoundly grateful," and complimented the club on "this most gracious act which you annually perform."

"I feel that the emphasis which your club places upon service and the expression of those ideals of service in your own activities is of far reaching importance and influence in this city. I am deeply honored to be listed with the distinguished Washingtonians who have previously received this medal," he said.

He said there was one fallacy he would avoid. "That is of considering youth as belonging to a category by themselves—as something quite different from the ordinary adult—as a group who present very special problems of their own, who have to be talked to in a different way with the result that they are made youth conscious and become aware of the fact that they really are not understood, which of course is true of those who treat them this way.

"But obviously, there are certain characteristics which are associated with the earlier years of a person's life. And what is needed is an amalgam of youth with its buoyant attitude toward the present, its courage and optimism and recklessness and willingness to dare, with the ripe experience of age which has past mistakes to guide it and the edge taken off the daring that has led to these mistakes. These two things, of course, should go hand in hand."

He said there is no boy or girl or teacher problem, and never has been. The problem is leadership, he declared. "Solve that problem and you have solved them all."

"And let us always think of the leader as the foremost companion, the friend who may have had rather more experience, the friend who believes in the dignity of human nature and in its undefeated possibilities. Creative conceptions which might alter the course of things cannot come from a generation which thinks meanly of itself," he said.

He hoped that the "spirit of the Cosmopolitan Club will encourage leaders to grow up in this city who will be the friends—the foremost companions—of those younger than themselves and who will introduce them to the joy, the fun, the adventure of service, always remembering that service is the rent we pay for our room on earth," he said.

Previous recipients of the Distinguished Service Medal are Theodore W. Noyes, Eugene Meyer, the late M. A. Leese, E. C. Graham, Miss Mary Virginia Merrick, Robert V. Fleming, Thomas P. Littlepage and Maj. Ernest W. Brown. William A. Edelblut, Cosmopolitan president, presided yesterday and the invocation and benediction were given by the Rev. Oliver J. Hart, D.D., rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette square.

Warren Urges World Court As Peace Aim

Cites 150-Year Success Of U. S. Bench in Talk At W. & M. College

By the Associated Press

Williamsburg, Va., Feb. 8.—A former United States assistant attorned general said today that the historical success of the Supreme Court in finding a peaceful settlement of disputes between sovereign States during the early days of the Nation pointed to the possibility of a World Court "achieving a similar success" internationally.

Charles Warren, of Washington, constitutional lawyer and Pulitzer prize winner in history, cited the record of the United States court "in spite of the prophets of disaster" as a goal toward which a world court might aim. He delivered the Cutler Foundation lecture at the annual Charter Day exercises at the College of William and Mary.

"The Supreme Court has continued to exist for 150 years—the keystone of our national fabric, as Washington termed it—" he said, "constantly and more fully exercising its functions for the settlement of interstate disputes and with increasing success. Need we despair over the possibility of a world court achieving a similar success?"

Palm Beach Basks In Sun, Garbo Light

By Inez Robb.

International News Service Staff Writer

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 8.—Both the sun and Greta Garbo came to town today and it's a tossup which is creating the greater sensation in this orchidaceous resort.

The strong, silent star of the talking pictures is here with her constant companion, handsome Dr. Gaylord Hauser, the Hollywood dietician, whose name has been linked romantically with hers since the leonine Leopold Stokowski faded from her personal history.

The great Garbo, Dr. Hauser and the latter's secretary, arrived here today after motoring from New York. They are registered at Whitehall, one of Palm Beach's flossiest hotels, and the great Garbo is occupying the penthouse suite.

By midafternoon, the whole town knew that Garbo and her romantic moment had arrived in town, and restaurant and night club owners anticipated the biggest business of the season.

Rosenberg Seeks Hearing On Milk Price

Cost in Alexandria, Arlington Too High, Delegate Asserts

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8.—Delegate Maurice Rosenberg, of Alexandria, said today members of the General Assembly from the Arlington-Alexandria area had filed a formal request with the State milk commission for a public hearing in that market on the question of reducing retail milk prices.

Joining Rosenberg in the request were Delegate Charles R. Fenwick and Senator William D. Medley, of Arlington.

The commission was in Roanoke today for a hearing there, and Rosenberg said he did not know when the request would be acted upon.

Present prices in the Arlington-Alexandria market, Rosenberg said, were too high. He reported that a recent reduction had been put into effect in the District of Columbia and that he understood another was contemplated.

Rosenberg said the request covered a review of both cash-and-carry and delivered milk prices.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, yesterday suggested to the House that the Justice Department should investigate what he termed the District "milk monopoly" while arguing for more funds for Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General.

Schulte said that one dairy in Washington "has a net profit of $461,000." He did not amplify the remark.

Fruit Growers Focus Interest On Marketing

W. Va. Group Seeks University Extension Study of Problems

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 8.—Fruit growers, speaking this afternoon through resolutions before closing the forty-seventh annual two-day meeting of the West Virginia Horticulture Society here, spotlighted marketing as their prime problem rather than production, and asked the State College of Agriculture and the university extension division to make marketing its main concern for the immediate future.

It suggested that study of apple by-products possibilities be made, elimination of unprofitable varieties, trees and orchards be considered; and costs in the distributive process be examined.

In another resolution the society said: "Inasmuch as delivery of packed fruit to consignees in city markets by trucks is subject to unloading charges by union labor not having any relation to the grower, we protest such high-handed brigandage."

The fruit men renewed their complaints against application of the Federal wage hour law to agriculture, and asked the West Virginia delegation attempt an amendment to the law specifically exempting horticulture and agriculture.

Other resolutions adopted includes: Requesting the USDA to "restore" total apple crop estimates, and supplement with "actual cruising" in the larger commercial apple belts to provide more accurate estimates of the forthcoming crop.

Also asked was vigorous national campaign to remove apple trees or orchards which are "semiabandoned, disease infested, improperly cared for or chronically unprofitable because of location or varieties. The society urges that any such program be voluntary. Henry W. Miller, jr., Papaw, was named chairman to act for the West Virginia society in any effort.

Appointment of a committee was authorized to recommend a practical uniform box and style of pack, holding one bushel of apples with sufficient tolerance to offset any unreasonable shrinkage in storage. The committee would urge the use of such a package by growers of this State and surrounding States; the committee being directed to contact the heads of the horticulture societies of Virginia and Maryland in applications of this program for a uniform package.

The society adjourned this afternoon to meet next year in this city. The time will be fixed later by the executive group. More than 600 attended the sessions, the largest attendance the society has had.

Myron C. Taylor, the President's personal peace representative to the Vatican, indicated after a call at the White House that he would soon sail for Italy. "Well, good-by, gentlemen," he told reporters, "I won't be bothering you again for some time."
